MACMILLAN CRITICIZED ON REPLY TO SOVIETS

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor Party today assailed Prime Minister Macmillan for failing to say "yes or no" in his reply to Premier Nikolai Bulganin's Soviet letter of Dec. 11.

Macmillan's reply, published Thursday night, gave no commitment on a Soviet-proposed summit conference within three months.

Hugh Gaitskell, Labor Party leader, said Macmillan has missed "a great opportunity to give the world the lead for which it has been waiting."

HUTCHISON FROM OTTAWA

'New Kind Of Leader For New Age'

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor of The Times

CONVENTION HALL, Ottawa—Across a shouting crowd of 5,000, the man on the platform faced the portraits of three other men 10 times life-size.

But the new leader of the Liberal Party bore no resemblance outwardly or inwardly to the white-plumed Laurier, the ponderous King or the sharp-featured St. Laurent whose heir he had just become.

Lester Pearson stood there in life-size as the living portrait of a new age.

His predecessors were all Victorians and children of the nineteenth century.

He belonged to the twentieth, differing not only in look but in experience, mind and temperament from any man who ever led the Liberal party before him.

Yet, like all of them, he seemed oddly alone in the sudden loneliness of leadership though the eyes of the whole nation were upon him.

There was the true meaning of Thursday night's climactic spectacle as Canadian Liberals placed their future and their hopes in Pearson's hands—a new kind of man would lead from now on in a new way. And he began to lead from that moment.

The hoarse cheers had hardly died down before he turned his formal acceptance address into a fierce opening assault upon the Diefenbaker government which he may defeat in Parliament next week.

For the first time the nation beheld in place of the suave international diplomat a fighting politician and perhaps a future prime minister delivering the greatest speech of his life.

Laurier's dual elegance, King's tortured paragraphs and St. Laurent's grandeur.

Nova Scotia Battered By Wind, Rain Storm

HALIFAX (BUP)—A violent wind and rain storm battered Nova Scotia for the second straight day, flooding homes, blocking highway and railway lines and disrupting communications, shipping and air travel. The storm moved into Nova Scotia Wednesday night and lashed the province with winds of up to 60 miles an hour. Up to five inches of rain fell in some areas.

The full force of the storm has been concentrated for the most part on mainland Nova Scotia, with Cape Breton receiving negligible amounts of rain and heavy winds.

The hardest hit areas are in southern and western Nova Scotia where many rivers and streams were running at flood levels.

Flooding has forced families to evacuate their homes near Bridgewater where water up to a depth of three feet is threatening the homes.

Railway lines to the south shore were under water in many places. The flooding is up to five feet in some low-lying areas.

Will Quit Writing

NICE, France (AP)—Somerset Maugham, who will be 84 next week, said today he is quitting writing "and this time for good." Maugham, who is living on the French Riviera, said he now is finishing his "last and final book" of five essays titled Point of View.

Oil Trade Jeopardized Canada Warns U.S.

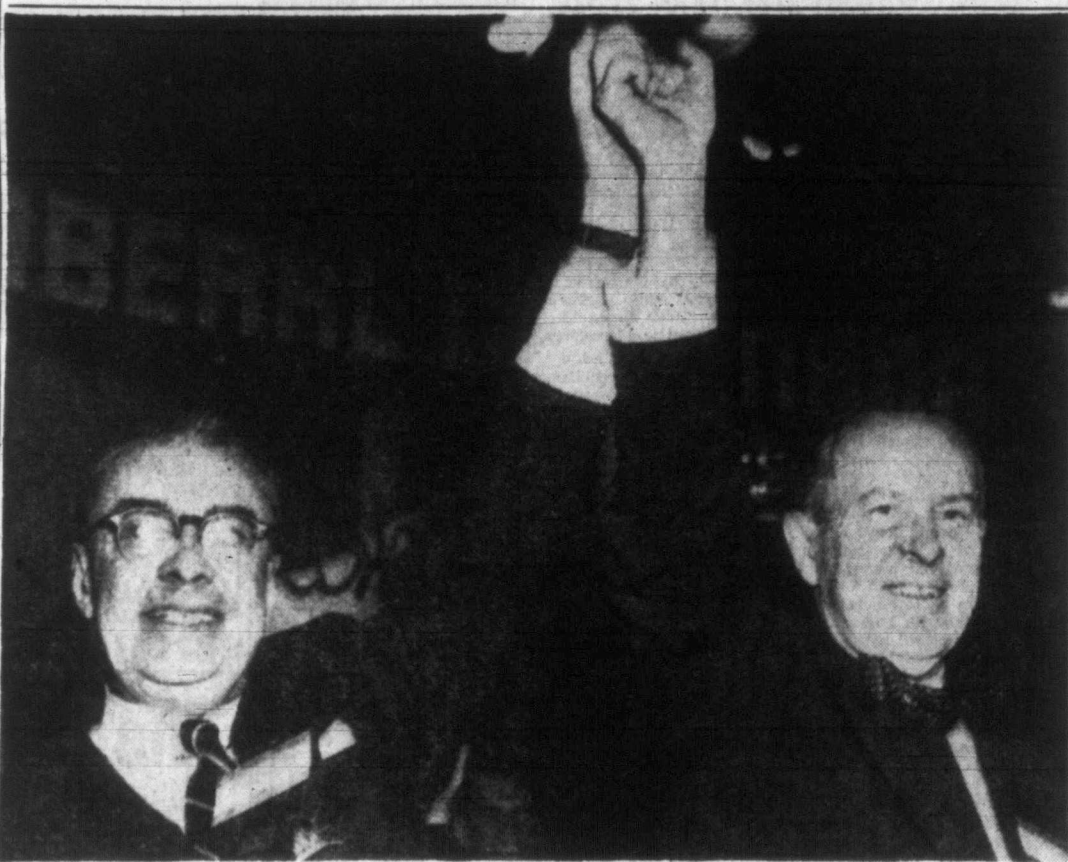

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has suggested to the United States government that its action in asking voluntary restriction of oil imports, including Canadian crude, is jeopardizing oil trade between the two countries.

In a strongly worded protest note sent to Washington and tabled today in the Commons, the Canadian administration said that Canada's imports of American oil in 1956 exceeded $100,000,000 worth.

"Surely it is unwise," the note added, "to jeopardize this two-way trade which works to the benefit of both countries."

Sommers Case Adjourned Until Feb. 12

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charges of conspiracy and bribery against former Forests Minister Robert Sommers and four lumber companies were adjourned today until Feb. 12 after all but one of the defence lawyers agreed to proceed with evidence then "all day, every day" until the case ends.

After a series of adjournments dating back some two months, when the first bribery charges were laid, Magistrate Oscar Orr ordered the police court trial bound over to that day.

The lone defence hold-out, Sommers' counsel, Nicholas Mussallam, said the former British Columbia cabinet minister "feels very strongly that he has a public duty" to attend the forthcoming B.C. legislature session.

The session, Mr. Mussallam said, starts Jan. 23 and is not likely to end until the end of March. Mr. Sommers sits as Social Credit member for Rossland-Trail.

Mr. Mussallam said he will consult with Sommers and advise the court whether his client would agree with Magistrate Orr's suggestion that "this is probably as important as sitting in the legislature."

Agreement on a date was reached in a pre-session huddle among prosecutor Stewart McMoran and lawyers representing all those charged—Sommers, C. D. Schultz, H. Wilson Gray, John M. Gray, B.C. Forest Products Limited, C. D. Schultz Limited, Pacific Coast Services Limited and Evergreen Lumber Sales Limited.

Also listed in two of the charges is Hector Forest, late president of B.C. Forest Products who died last December.

Douks in Moscow

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Russian authorities have been "very sympathetic" to a proposal for the mass migration of Sons of Freedom Doukhobors to Russia from Canada, visiting representatives of the sect said today.

Cyprus Chief Leaves

LONDON (AP)—Sir Hugh Foot expressed belief today that a "just settlement" will be found to the Cyprus problem. He then boarded a plane to return to his duties as governor of the Mediterranean island.

Pearson Cheered By Friends, Foes

(From Times' Wire Services)

Newly-elected leader of the Liberal Party today was the subject of congratulations from many quarters. Political foes as well as friends paid tribute to his high personal qualities.

Meanwhile loser in the leadership election, Hon. Paul Martin, received applause from all sides of the Commons when he entered the chamber for today's sittings.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, confined to his home with a back ailment, issued the text of a telegram he had sent to Mr. Pearson. It said:

"My warmest congratulations are extended to you on the achievement of the highest honor your party can offer, which carries with it the great responsibilities of leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in Parliament. With all good wishes for continued health and happiness."

Mr. Pearson, who will not take his seat in the Commons as Opposition leader until Monday, replied by telegram: "Please accept my warm appreciation of your friendly message of congratulations on my election as leader of the Liberal party. Kindest personal regards."

At United Nations headquarters, Mr. Pearson's winning of the leadership of Canada's Liberal party gratified his many admirers on the banks of the East River.

It's safe to say no statesman of any country has been more popular than Pearson over the years with the diplomats and newsmen who regularly attend the sessions of the General Assembly and the Security Council.

"Pearson is one diplomat who never leads with his chin, yet never ducks a hard question," explained one veteran correspondent. "He weaves an almost hypnotic spell at times over even the most insulated of his colleagues and the most hard-boiled reporters."

Another said "Mike Pearson is the most approachable big shot I know. Very few American newsmen ever got to know Henry Cabot Lodge well enough to call him 'Cabot.' Nearly everybody soon learns to call Mr. Pearson 'Mike' and feel he is being neither familiar nor disrespectful."

Other comments: "Pearson is by all odds the best speaker the UN has ever heard. He always is courageous and witty—and to the point."

"The Canadians missed Pearson in the Assembly session just ended. The new Conservative delegation hardly has had time to get its feet good and wet—and when people around here think of what Canada's going to do or say, they still think of Pearson first."

Robert Strachan, provincial CCF leader, said he thinks Mr. Pearson has tremendous ability, but he added "ability as a political requires party policies, which until now the Liberals have lacked."

Hon. H. H. Stevens, trade minister in the R. B. Bennett government, sounded a sour note when he criticized Mr. Pearson's convention speech. He told a Conservative federal nomination meeting at Port Coquitlam that the new Liberal chief has become a "prejudiced party man instead of a statesman."

Th' Royal Commission'll find out whut th' schools are teachin'. Lot o' th' kids w'd like t' know too.

Seems like th' Lib'l convention put in a Pearson t' Pearson long-distance call.

Bet th' th' just Canadian political convention thet stirred much interest at th' UN.

STIFF TAXES HIT INCOMES IN BRITAIN

LONDON (AP)—Only 600 persons in Britain had incomes of £6,000 ($16,800) or more last year after paying the country's stiff income taxes, the government reported today.

The basic income tax in Britain is 42½ per cent, and the take rises steeply along with income.

A total of 45 Britons reported gross incomes, before taxes, of £100,000 ($280,000) or more during the year.

Scots Want Margaret As Queen

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP)—Scottish nationalists suggested on Thursday night that Princess Margaret be made Queen of Scotland.

The idea arose at a public meeting sponsored in this capital city by the Scottish patriot movement, who have campaigned for years for home rule.

"It might be the happy way out of a rather difficult situation," said Miss Wendy Wood, a veteran nationalist who heads the patriot movement.

"I mean no disrespect to the present sovereign. Queen Elizabeth is the Queen that England wants."

"She has the characteristics that English people like, but it is not possible to have characteristics which both the Scots and the English appreciate."

Party Planning Early Caucus

By C. R. BLACKBURN

OTTAWA (CP)—Lester B. Pearson, newly-chosen Liberal leader, faces the immediate problem of organizing his party's attitude toward trying to force a general election.

It is believed Mr. Pearson, elected leader at the national convention which ended Thursday night, is of the opinion that the Opposition should set out to defeat the minority Progressive Conservative government as swiftly as possible and force an election.

A major opportunity for an amendment expressing want of confidence in the government will be offered Monday afternoon on a formal government motion to move the Commons into committee on the administration's spending estimates.

There have been rumors that the Liberals would take Monday's opportunity to make their first move of the session to upset the government.

But it is reported that more party stalwarts oppose that than favor it.

Mr. Pearson told reporters Thursday night that was something to be decided in caucus and that the caucus would be very soon "for events are crowding in on us."

So far, the official Liberal opposition has followed its promise made at the start of the session in mid-October—that it would not initiate or vote for any motions seeking the overthrow of the government until the new administration has had a chance to present its program of legislation.

Delay Would Give Tories No Excuse

It is understood the party's seasoned veterans and many of its younger circle feel that to force an election would enable the government to go to the people with a complaint that it was not given an opportunity to put its program into action.

An early election would relieve the government of bringing down a budget and of completing fiscal negotiations with the provinces.

It is argued that the government would have a difficult time presenting a budget that would take care of heavy promised expenditures and still permit lower taxes.

Those favoring efforts to force an immediate election feel that the high and rising unemployment figures might be effective ammunition right now whereas the economic situation might be greatly improved by June.

The 265-seat Commons comprises 113 Conservatives, 106 Liberals, 25 CCF, 19 Social Credit and two independent members. The Liberals would need the help of at least 27 other members to defeat the government, assuming both major parties are at full strength.

Both the CCF and the Social Credit have offered want-of-confidence motions at the current session but have not been supported by the Liberals.

There always is a possibility that the government itself might seek dissolution and call a new election.

'Opposition Duty To Act Like One' Says New Leader

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals have a new leader and a shined-up platform today, but it is still a toss-up as to what their immediate plans will be.

Lester B. Mike Pearson, one-time semi-pro baseball player, threw nothing but curves at reporters late Thursday night when they tried to sound him out on the prospect after his election as party leader to succeed retiring Louis St. Laurent.

"The duty of an opposition is to act like one," the 60-year-old former external affairs minister said cryptically.

The decision on party strategy would have to be made "very soon—and I mean very soon."

Biggest Winner of Any Convention

Meanwhile, Mr. Pearson stood as the most lopsided winner of any convention in the history of the party.

He rolled up 1,074 votes against 305 for Paul Martin, 54, his long-time pal and former health minister, and a single vote for Rev. H. Lloyd Henderson, 50, mayor of Portage la Prairie, Man.

Mr. St. Laurent, now 75, carry into the next election virtually 848 in 1948 against 323 for former agriculture minister

Pearson Pulls No Punches Laying Policies on Line

OTTAWA (CP)—A new political personality has emerged from the national Liberal convention, a man skilled in international diplomacy who has suddenly turned blunt fury on his domestic opponents.

Lester B. Pearson, the one-time semi-professional baseball player who won the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize, demonstrated Thursday night that he will pull no punches against the progressive Conservative government.

After his overwhelming victory as new leader the audience of more than 5,000 persons gave him a tremendous, prolonged cheer as he prepared to deliver his acceptance address, a speech studied with charges against the Conservatives and full of hope for the Liberals' future.

Summing up his own brand of liberalism, the new leader outlined eight main objectives and beliefs:

1. A Canada united, but not in narrow nationalism.
2. Full employment, striving to end recessions.
3. Increased social security.
4. Trade expansion, not diversion.
5. Fair sharing of Canada's wealth with less-developed regions and primary producers.
6. Expansion of share-the-wealth equalization payments to the provinces.
7. NATO strengthening, and support of the United Nations as the cornerstone of Canada's foreign policy.

8. Termination of the Progressive Conservative "pause" in Canada's expansion.

The new leader promised to lead his party back to power "soon."

The 60-year-old former career diplomat pledged himself to follow Liberal principles and told a cheering convention:

"With your help, I can and will lead this new, strong and great party to victory—and soon—not for ourselves but for our country."

fatherly air were all missing from this speech.

So, too, were those "pulsating platitudes" and self-hypnosis which he attributed to his opponent Diefenbaker.

Pearson began with the familiar boyish grin, the homespun pleasantness, the disarming look of innocence, the hands thrust casually into the coat pockets, the black-rimmed spectacles sliding from his nose.

He finished with clenched fists, hoarse voice and the blows of a sledge hammer. And in the course of this transformation he laid down so all could see them the battle lines of his election campaign.

The campaign thus revealed is based on three propositions.

First, the Liberal Party governed Canada well in Canada's greatest years but can do still better on its return to power.

Second, the Conservative government is not responsible for all the nation's economic troubles but has gravely worsened them by timidity, hesitation, confusion, concealment of vital facts and especially by mismanagement of foreign trade.

Third, the Liberal Party and only the Liberal Party can rescue the nation from the last seven months of blundering and unemployment, but must not promise impossibilities or make national business a "give away program or a lottery."

This will be Pearson's approach to the political crisis scheduled to break next week, and his approach will have far more effect on Liberal policy than the party's new platform.

Ended in New Upsurge of Confidence

The public will soon forget the platform. Pearson will be around for a long time yet.

So ended the Liberal Party's fourth national convention in a new upsurge of confidence, most of it built on the personality of one man.

That man, dog tired now but still grinning, was led by a pipe band upstairs to a littered room where he faced a battery of inquisitive reporters.

After they were finished with their inquisition could Pearson escape at last to his home and his preparations for next week's crucial events.

But there was more to the convention than his elevation to leadership.

While the minds of the delegates and the nation were concentrated on a vivid human being the Liberal party was laboriously executing a fundamental shift of policy comparable only to its great shift under King into the welfare state.

When it assembled in Ottawa the party had to consider, apart from leadership, one simple but urgent question—should it maintain the stern posture of its last years in office or should it move sharply leftwards and seek to outrun the Diefenbaker government in the pursuit of social reform?

That choice has now been made. The party has moved sharply to the left and far beyond the government in the promise of a better society for all Canadians.

The new platform leaves no doubt on this score.

New Liberalism Broad, Costly

Though the party has returned to its oldest principles in sponsoring free trade with Britain and lower tariffs in general, it has pressed forward the new Liberalism on a broad and costly front.

Contributory old age pensions at 65 years of age, a form of parity prices for farmers, a scheme of health insurance, low-cost housing, large public works to relieve unemployment, deliberate deficits to stimulate business by the Keynesian Theory—all these and other reforms are designed to retrieve the clothes of radicalism which the Tories stole last June while the St. Laurent government was in bathing.

Period of Heavy Deficits Ahead

There are great inflationary pressures in it also and undoubtedly under any available government a period of heavy deficits ahead.

If the Conservative and Liberal conventions represented it accurately, this kind of policy is what the Canadian people want. Assuredly they will get it in the visible future.

The convention delegates were not thinking of these things as they went home.

They were thinking of leadership, like the whole party, seemed united, friendly and confident after an unnoted human incident which—presented in allegory a revealing image of the new down-to-earth age in Liberal politics.

Martin, who seldom carries money with him, begged a cup of coffee from a newspaper correspondent and then begged a cafeteria lunch from Pearson, who readily agreed, but, picking up the cheque, found that he had only 30c in his pocket.

He borrowed a couple of dollars and paid the cashier. That could never have happened to Laurier, King or St. Laurent in an era now well and truly buried.

NEW LIBERAL LEADER 'FINE MAN'—BENNETT

Premier Bennett said today he thinks the new Liberal Party leader, Lester Pearson, is "personally a very fine man and a fine Canadian."

The Premier said the wrong interpretation had been placed on a remark he made Thursday that neither Mr. Pearson nor Paul Martin were fit to hold office as prime minister.

What he meant, Mr. Bennett said, was that both men were unfit only in the sense they were members of the previous Liberal government and share responsibility for present economic conditions which he says were brought on by tight money policies.

minister dropped his customary gloved diplomatic approach and let go with a sharp political blast against the Conservatives.

The resolutions adopted by the three-day Liberal convention, he said, were a startling and stimulating contrast to those passed at the 1956 Conservative convention. The Conservative resolutions were, "born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history."

"CRITICAL TIME"
"At this critical time, government is more than a give-away program or a national lottery."

An MP for Algoma East, Ont., since 1948, he said he would give the party energetic, aggressive leadership, "but not narrowly partisan." He might make mistakes but "I can promise you that they will be honest mistakes."

Then, turning to the retiring leader, Louis St. Laurent, he added: "I want to say to him that we still need him in the active ranks of the party as long as he is willing to serve."

Mr. Pearson has asked Mr. St. Laurent to remain as opposition leader in the Commons until next Monday.

While promising delegates that he soon will attempt to lead the Liberals back to power, he gave no indication of how he plans to do this.

"This first task is to convince the Canadian people that, already, they need us again to manage their affairs."

GROWING CONCERN
Though the Conservatives had been only seven months in office, there was growing concern in the country over trade and unemployment.

"Now it would be foolish and unfair to blame the government for everything that has gone wrong—and much has—since last June. We will not talk and act in that regard as they did when they were in opposition."

But the Conservatives had created an atmosphere of uncertainty—"the propaganda

The trip to the west coast was scheduled before the leadership convention.

which the Conservatives seem to think will hypnotize the Canadian people into believing what is not true seems likely only to hypnotize themselves."

Unemployment was a challenge to society, a challenge which a Liberal government, unlike the Conservatives, would meet. It also would meet farm problems.

But the party's first job was organization. It had to have "and will have—at once—a strong, decentralized organization based on our constituency associations."

TO TRAVEL WIDELY
"To see that we have it, I am prepared to travel widely across the length and breadth of this country. I want to meet you and hear your views as to what we should be doing to maintain and strengthen the organization of this party."

"Then our renewed and strengthened organization must put forth our message of a new and strong and progressive Liberalism."

"With the right policies—and right organization—we will soon be returned to office again. That is the greatest service we now can perform for Canada."

James G. Gardiner and 56 for former air minister (now senator) C. G. (Chubby) Power.

The late Mackenzie King got in as a dark horse in 1919. Previous leaders were chosen by the top party advisers.

After Thursday night's voting Mr. Pearson got quick unanimity from the convention of his selection. At Mr. Martin's motion, and his former colleague pledged full support.

He promptly promised to lead the Liberals back to power "soon" and blasted the Conservatives with one of the strongest political attacks he has made since he came out of the neutrality of a career civil servant to become minister of external affairs in 1948.

Platform resolutions adopted at the 1956 convention that chose John G. Diefenbaker as Conservative leader, he said, were born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history.

Mr. Martin, who had waged an intensive fight for the leadership, met the convention verdict with a smile and said to the delegates:

"You have just elected the next prime minister of Canada."

GRASS ROOTS APPEAL

The former health minister's supporters had based much of their campaign on the contention that he had appeal for the "grass roots" as opposed to the party brass supposedly supporting Mr. Pearson.

Former agriculture minister Gardiner was the only former cabinet colleague to back Mr. Martin publicly, partly because of an expressed belief that Mr. Martin is the best vote-catcher in the country.

Mr. St. Laurent maintained an air of outward neutrality, but it was reported he favored Mr. Pearson, his successor as external affairs minister.

Right after the vote, Mr. St. Laurent urged party workers to get solidly behind Mr. Pearson and expressed confidence he will become prime minister at the next election.

Later, it was announced that although the Commons sits today Mr. St. Laurent—at the new leader's request—will remain as Opposition leader until Monday, when Mr. Pearson will take over.

The new leader, who has sat in the Commons for northern Ontario's Algoma East mining constituency since 1948, will carry into the next election virtually a brand new platform from the one with which the Liberals went down to defeat last June 10 after 22 years of uninterrupted power.

B.C. Man Gets Share In Williamson Mine

DAR-ES-SALAAM, Tanganyika (Reuters) — John Williamson, Canadian multi-millionaire diamond magnate who died earlier this month, left 800 shares in his mine to his brother and sister, it was announced today.

His brother, Percy Boyd Williamson, of Kelowna, B.C., already owned 300 of the 1,200 shares in the Mwadui diamond mine.

Williamson and his sister,

Mrs. Alex R. Millar, announced the majority shares will remain in the Williamson family and said they do not intend to sell the mine.

I. C. Chopra, the late mine owner's legal adviser and friend, owns 100 shares in the mine. He and Percy Williamson will be the new company directors.

Percy Williamson, who arrived here earlier this week, and Mrs. Millar, who is believed to be living in London, were the only close relatives of Williamson.

City Delegate Denies 'Brass' Ran Convention

CONVENTIONAL HALL, OTTAWA—Hugh Ramsay of Victoria leaped up in the Liberal convention here Thursday to deny the charge that the party is dominated by the "brass" and not by the "grass" as charged by some supporters of Mr. Paul Martin.

Presenting a resolution on labor problems, quickly approved by the convention, Mr. Ramsay said:

"I would like to express my appreciation that people like myself from the grass roots members of the Liberal party had a full voice in the sub-committee dealing with labor. We discussed and dealt with every resolution dealing with labor sent in by the various local associations and from these resolutions formed this final resolution."

DEMOCRATIC FASHION

Speaking with newspapermen, Mr. Ramsay said there was no truth in the story that the convention had been railroaded from the backroom by party leaders.

On the contrary, he declared, the convention had operated in the most democratic fashion with every delegate free to express his views on everything.

The agreement was signed between the Ceylon government and a visiting Soviet cultural delegation.

OTTAWA (CP)—Something old, something new and something borrowed.

That sums up the Liberal Party's revamped political platform with which newly-elected leader Lester B. Mike Pearson today sets out to win the country's confidence.

The old: Continued federal equalization payments to the provinces; selective immigration and voluntary integration of Indians into full Canadian citizenship.

The new: A pension plan financed by government-employer contributions, scholarships coupled with interest-free loans to university students, and an undefined "exclusively Canadian flag."

The borrowed: The voluntary revocable checkoff of union dues, long advocated by the CCF; "deficiency payments"—or farm subsidies—urged in the past by the Social Credit and CCF parties, and "improved" cash advances on farm-stored grain, a principle long rejected by the former Liberal government but recently implemented by the new Progressive Conservative government.

SOMETHING FOR ALL

The refurbished Liberal platform has something for everybody.

Coverage for major medical, surgical and dental expenses in addition to hospital insurance and unemployment insurance to the sick.

Payment of storage costs for farm-stored grain and participation in provincial crop-insurance plans.

A minimum wage and standard working hours for workers under federal jurisdiction, with no compulsory arbitration of disputes.

Improved war veterans benefits as needs arise.

Efforts toward disarmament and planning for a permanent United Nations police force to maintain peace. Weapons development, especially for North American defence.

Moves towards a federal-provincial-municipal program of building trunk highways, and development roads to the north. Sympathetic consideration of British proposals for gradual development of Anglo-Canadian free trade, and removal of trade restrictions in the North Atlantic area.

Protection against abuses of consumer credit by placing small loans and finance companies under the Bank Act.

Lower down payments and longer amortization periods for housing loans, more federal aid for slum clearance and low-cost housing, and an increased supply of mortgage money.

Price supports, low-cost loans and subsidies for boat construction, research and improvements to the patrol system for coastal fisheries.

'DOUBLE' BEERS BACK BY END OF THE MONTH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Double-sized beer glasses are to be used for the first time since the Second World War at the end of this month in British Columbia beer parlors.

A spokesman for the B.C. Hotelmen's Association here said Thursday that a new 15-ounce glass will shortly be delivered to beer parlors and will be in use Jan. 28.

The price of the big beer will be 20 cents.

Bishops Back UBC Campaign

The House of Bishops of the Anglican Church in B.C., at a meeting Wednesday in Vancouver, passed a resolution supporting UBC in its current drive for $7,500,000.

The resolution stated: "This House of Bishops heartily supports the campaign for funds for the University of British Columbia presently in progress, and urges the people of the church to contribute generously according to their means."

Archbishop Harold E. Sexton, Victoria, presided over the meeting.

The house also decreed that a service of thanksgiving and prayer to mark the centenary of the province be held in all Anglican churches in B.C. on Sunday, April 27.

The bishops have prepared an order of service to be used on that Sunday. Copies will be distributed to Anglican clergy shortly.

The Liberal Watershed

FOR THE SECOND POSITION in national politics the nation has found the right man. The choice of Lester Pearson as leader of the Liberal Party and of the Parliamentary Opposition was both wise and inevitable but it was not made primarily by a party convention. It had been made in advance by the nation. For most people, regardless of partisanship, will agree that Mr. Pearson is the ablest Canadian statesman of our generation, the first Canadian indeed, who has made a major impact upon the free world at large.

The Liberal Party is safe in his hands. The nation will be safe in his hands also when his call comes.

In the meantime he faces formidable problems and critical decisions but from the party convention he has received in addition to leadership one inestimable asset. He faces the country with a bold new policy and a clear issue.

Most of the Liberal platform will be forgotten as soon as it is printed or before. Much of it will soon be irrelevant in the light of changing events. But one Liberal policy will not be forgotten and will be relevant as long as the nation's livelihood depends overwhelmingly on foreign trade and so long as Canada remains Britain's friend.

In deciding to sponsor the step-by-step development of free trade with Britain the Liberal Party has crossed one of the great watersheds of its history—and there can be no doubt that Mr. Pearson himself has strongly propelled it in this direction.

Here, then we have the clear issue on which the next election can, should and apparently will be fought: an issue of deepest principle that certainly will divide Canadians but will quite overshadow the more seamy side of politics.

The Diefenbaker Government came to office on a promise to increase trade with Britain and decrease it with the United States. When Britain took this offer seriously and proposed a free trade area spanning the Atlantic and finally encompassing the Commonwealth, Mr. Diefenbaker took fright. The British project was hastily swept under the rug because, of course, it would damage some of the protected eastern Canadian industries vital to the Conservative Party and its coffers.

The same political motives are at work also in the Liberal Party but they have been overcome by the decision of this week's convention. Only one party is willing and able to undertake the removal of tariffs between Canada and Britain for the benefit of both. After the Liberal Party's decision the Canadian people can see for themselves who are Britain's friends in this country—among them no one more devoted and powerful than Mr. Pearson.

Whether the Liberal Party can win an election by its bold policy remains to be seen but in the perspective of history a single election is only an incident. The important thing is that the Liberal Party is prepared to stand for a policy bound to be unpopular in many constituencies and to follow a leader who is ready to stand or fall on it. Thereby our politics is lifted to a new and higher plane after years of confusion and blurred party labels.

The same cannot be said for some of the speeches at the Liberal convention, especially the speeches holding Mr. Diefenbaker responsible for a great depression. In the first place there is no great depression yet and in the second the state of the economy is for the most part the result of conditions over which Mr. Diefenbaker has no control. It stems mainly out of a fall in investment after a period of almost unlimited capital expenditure.

The real indictment of the Diefenbaker Government is not that it created a decline in business and a rise in unemployment but that so far it has devised no policy to cure these ills.

This should be indictment enough for the Liberal politicians without any need for exaggeration and unfairness. The Liberal Party does not have to resort to any misrepresentation in the approaching election. It should stand on its own positive policy: a broad expansion of international trade in the Commonwealth and, if possible in the whole Atlantic community.

There lies the hope of permanent prosperity and the only chance of permanent strength throughout the free world. No Canadian is as able as Mr. Pearson to present, advocate and achieve that hope.

The Clothing Industry Protests

AMONG THOSE INTERESTS which have protested the application of the Canadian woolen industry for a higher protective tariff, the clothing and dress manufacturers presented the most telling arguments.

The clothing industry's brief to the Tariff Board made it clear that a higher tariff would harm their business as well as the consumer, and in the long run would harm the woolen mills also. It was suggested that the mills do as they had in 1954 when faced with overseas competition—adopt more efficient methods of manufacture to meet the challenge.

The clothiers showed that they could not meet Canadian requirements by depending on Canadian woolens alone. Because of the great volume handled, British mills could produce exclusive designs for the American and Canadian trade, but this business would not be profitable for Canadian mills with smaller output. The latter must stay with the staple patterns to achieve profitable volume. The imported exclusive designs are to this extent not directly competitive with the Canadian products.

If these imports were subject to higher duties, said the clothiers, it would merely mean that they would be excluded to the detriment of the Canadian public and the bankruptcy of Canadian garment firms, or that they would enter but be put at a crushing price disadvantage as compared with the popular synthetic fabrics, with similar serious effects on the Canadian clothing industry.

Figures were produced to show that the clothing industry was a larger factor in our economy than the textile mills. The former employs 72,637 workers and produces goods worth $544 millions each year. The mills, on the other hand, employ only 6,633 people, with products totalling $58.7 millions a year.

To help the smaller industry to the detriment of the larger would be poor policy, it was argued. In any case the help could be only short-lived; all eventually would lose.

Among other interests appearing before the board to oppose the rise in tariffs were the logging and lumbering industry, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the Interprovincial Farm Union Council. These advanced the argument that exclusion of imports by means of a tariff would be detrimental to Canada's exports, since overseas countries can only pay for our goods with their own.

The whole textile investigation is still before the Tariff Board and reports on the various phases, including woolen imports, may not be available for several months yet. When completed, however, the survey ought to give the government of the day a full background for a decision on whether or not to raise tariffs. It is difficult to see, all factors considered, how an increase could be justified.

Social Change by Diet

THE ANXIETY OF "NORTH-west Territories" officials over the reduction of caribou herds is easily understood.

The caribou provides food, clothing and other essentials to thousands of northern natives. Should the animal become extinct, their way of life would perish and with it many of the natives themselves.

This would be a repetition of the fate of the plains Indians for whom the vast, roaming herds of buffalo meant a particular form of life. The buffalo disappeared and with it the plains Indian as he had existed for centuries. It is true that descendants of the natives survive, but not in the society they once knew. Progress, as it is called, has changed them.

Similarly the nomads of the north would have to change their culture if the rapid depletion of caribou continued. It is suggested that the long term solution to the problem is to provide for those depending on the caribou alternative sources of income and employment which would give them a livelihood.

Conceivably this will be the eventual development. The natives will be given the advantages of modern modes of life.

An intelligent native, comparing the old and the new, might quite understandably ask where progress entered that picture.

A Speaking Acquaintance

THESE are times in which the talk is all of talk. We have private talks, confidential talks, emergency talks, money talks, down-to-earth talks, face-to-face talks, and that prize of them all—summit talks. "Thinking man," the ancients called us. They may have been right in their day. But "talking man" would be a better description today.

Many people have an anxious, almost pathetic, faith that talking will solve all our problems, that if the great leaders of the world would get together and talk things over everything would come out all right. They hold this faith despite the obvious fact that such talks have not achieved notable success in the past, and that, with the participants seeking advantage rather than agreement, they are not likely to do so in the future.

There is much to be said for the proposal that human talk be rationed. Imagine the improvement if everyone were given a quota of 500 or 1,000 words a day, after which he or she would be dumb until midnight loosened the vocal cords for the next 24 hours.

How we would husband our words in order to get the most benefit from them! How cautiously we would deal them out, wasting few in scolding or vituperation!

Even our thinking would improve, as we were forced to put our ideas into concise form. We would have to stop to think before we spoke—which right off the bat would cure a large number of the ills of the world.

As Our Readers See It

Abomination

There is much speculation, today, on what constitutes "the abomination of desolation" mentioned by our Lord in St. Matt. XXIV-15. I think the Rev. Albert Barnes in his Commentary, written almost a hundred years ago, came the nearest of any that I know of to the truth. He says: "Something resembling the wings of a bird, spread out, pouring desolation on a people in the manner of a storm!"

Dental Health

In discussing factors relating to tooth decay, pros and cons resolve on the effects of fluorine in the water supply as a preventative of tooth decay.

There is considerable evidence by researchers that fluorine in the proper amount prevents tooth decay. Is there evidence by researchers that lack of fluorine is the cause or reason of tooth decay? If so, can it be explained why there are varying degrees of susceptibility to tooth decay among children of the same family with the same mouth hygiene habits?

There are other factors that have a bearing on tooth decay; such as, evidence by researchers in the field of nutrition, that vitamins and minerals contribute to the health of the teeth. It appears that some vitamins and minerals in the right combination are responsible for the formation of good, hard, well-formed teeth. Improper amounts of vitamins and minerals results in abnormal conditions. Absence of vitamin C means cessation of production of tooth structure; the dentine, enamel and cementum.

Space does not permit outlining further properties of the above and other factors that might contribute to the health or ill health of the teeth. Therefore, I would suggest to all concerned that further investigation might yield handsome rewards, that no approach to the subject should be dismissed until it is thoroughly studied from all angles, including freedom of choice of the individual.

The freedom of choice should be jealously guarded. The greater the freedom of personal choice, the greater the safeguard to a free democratic way of life.

All for Centigrade

I have often wondered why we do not use the simple Centigrade thermometer in preference to the clumsy Fahrenheit.

With the zero mark placed at freezing point we can tell at a glance how many degrees of frost or heat are registered. I am told that Fahrenheit went by the freezing point of mercury. That is something most of us know little about, but we all know, or should know, the freezing point of water. There are also other decimal points on the Centigrade scale, and I believe it is in general use in laboratories and technical institutions.

I know that custom creates a crust that is hard to break—even stupid customs. But I think a change could be brought about if weather announcers quoted the Centigrade registration first though the comparison with Fahrenheit could also be made until such times as people were supplied with Centigrade thermometers.

Once people got used to them they would think no more of a 32 degree freezing point.

UBC President Replies

I read with interest the letter written by Mr. Derek Pethick, which you published. Because it deals with the University of British Columbia, and makes mention of myself, I felt I should reply to it.

Since 1944—the year I came to this university—seven new faculties, five schools, and a wide variety of courses, have been added to the university, all designed to serve the people of this province, and provided at their request and at the request of the Government and Legislature. Several of these, including medicine, are professional faculties and include certain practical and clinical training and experience.

The School of Physical Education is one of these. It is designed to meet the requirements of a number of groups and organizations, including the Department of Education. These authorities must have trained personnel to teach various classes and groups in their communities, organizations or schools. As in other professional departments, including nursing—which incidentally was constituted in 1919—a certain amount of practical experience is essential and is provided. But in all of these professional schools and faculties most of the work done has an academic content and no one gets any credit toward a degree or a diploma on the basis of the practical courses alone.

As for myself: in view of the state of the world, I would like to think that the various trips that I make to other parts of this continent and to other countries are "goodwill trips." Unfortunately perhaps, most of them are concerned with more mundane matters such as persuading governments, foundations, corporations, and private citizens, to increase their contributions to the revenue of this university. Others are made in order to locate the best men and women in their fields, with a view to adding them to our staff. Still others are to visit sister universities in this and other countries, to learn from the best of them something of their policies and practices, and, where appropriate and feasible, to introduce some of these to the University of British Columbia.

Perhaps, in conclusion, I should point out that the Senate of the university rather than the president is responsible for the courses that are offered, and for all the faculties, schools and departments that form a part of the university. It is also responsible for upholding the reputation and academic standards of the university. Because I have visited a good many other institutions throughout the world, I know that the reputation of the University of British Columbia commands universal respect, and I do know that the Senate and the members of Faculty have a high regard for these standards and this reputation and are determined to maintain them at a high level.

N. A. M. MACKENZIE,

President

The University of British Columbia.

FROM WASHINGTON

By STEWART ALSOP

The Missile Proposal

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's letter to Premier Bulganin is not only well-written and forceful counter-propaganda, it is also a major state paper, representing the kind of basic national policy decision which only the President can make.

The decision is to press seriously for an agreement with the Soviets to eliminate the long-range ballistic missiles from the arsenals of both sides. That is the meaning, of course, of the President's proposal, that "outer space should be used only for peaceful purposes."

The proposal is at least comparable in significance to the old Acheson-Lilienthal-Baruch plan for control of nuclear weapons.

As in that case, nothing at all may come of it. All the same, because the President's decision embodies a major national policy, it is worth trying to understand the reasoning which lies behind it.

Affirmative Answer

The proposal raises two obvious questions. Is an agreement to eliminate the long-range ballistic missiles technically feasible? And would such an agreement be in the national interest of the United States?

Those who favored the proposal inside the government (they faced bitter opposition) answer both questions in the affirmative. Their reasoning is largely based on the nature of the ballistic missiles at the present state of their development.

In the first place, a ballistic missile follows a trajectory which carries it to an altitude of several hundred miles. Any test-firing of a missile is thus subject to detection at a great distance by line-of-sight radar, as our own Turkish radar installations, which have detected hundreds of Soviet missile firings, have proved. Thus a limited number of agreed radar installations would be sufficient to detect any illegal test-firings on either side.

Obviously, the United States has no intention of agreeing simply to cease testing missiles. But it is also considered technically feasible to render existing missiles useless. For in the present state of the art, both ICBMs and IRBMs require an elaborate base structure.

Each base is like a small, permanent factory, since the liquid fuel must be constantly manufactured on the spot. The Pentagon has already publicly announced the precise location of America's first projected ICBM base, simply because it will in any event be impossible to hide the huge installation, which will cost in the neighborhood of $100 million.

Because the bases are so visible and elaborate, a limited and manageable inspection system would be sufficient to locate missile bases on both sides. In fact, our own intelligence already has a rather precise idea of the location of existing Soviet missile bases, and once the bases were located and dismantled, neither side could threaten the other with decisive surprise attack, simply because the weapons are useless without the bases.

So much for technical feasibility. As for the national interest, one point is obvious, that the Soviets are already far ahead of the U.S. in the missile field. But that is not all. By the very nature of the weapon, the ballistic missiles favor a closed society over an open society.

Ideal Weapon

For a closed society, they offer the ideal weapon of surprise attack. For an open society, they impose the almost impossible requirement of an instant, on-the-spot decision to strike back, which is in the nature of things almost impossible in a democracy. Take the ICBM base mentioned above. Soviet ICBMs will obviously be zeroed in on that base.

Given less than twenty minutes warning time, who is to decide to fire the missiles before the base itself is obliterated? And even if an automatic (and most undemocratic) on-the-spot decision is possible, will that be enough? For in the present state of the art, a liquid-fueled missile requires complex "topping up" preparations before it can be fired. These preparations take, not minutes, but hours.

Ballistic Control

These are some of the arguments which persuaded the President to make the control of ballistic missiles the key proposal in his letter to Bulganin and a key point of American national policy. There are, as there always are, arguments on the other side.

One such argument is that the Soviets might secretly perfect air-breathing missiles which could not be surely detected by radar, or solid fuel missiles which would not require the easily detectable base system.

In any event, it is no doubt unlikely that the Soviets will negotiate seriously, now that we have, by our folly, allowed them to gain a decisive lead in the missiles. Even if they do, extremely powerful voices will be raised in the United States, especially in the Pentagon and in industry, against any real agreement. But when all this is said, it is still true that the President's proposal is a hopeful sign of reviving initiative, after the long years of drift.

DENNIS THE MENACE

From Our Files

Jan. 17, 1898 — Mr. Ivan de Malchin, the Russian swordsmen, will open his fencing salon about the middle of next week. It will be conducted along the lines of a Parisian salle d'armes, with French fencing techniques.

Jan. 17, 1918 — Vancouver: During the present month the police here have obtained 41 convictions for offences under the Prohibition Act, a record for any similar period since start of the dry season.

Jan. 17, 1938 — Delmar, Cal.: Sam Sneed walked away with the $3,000 Bing Crosby golf tournament yesterday for the second straight year. His score for 36 holes was 139, and he set a course record of 67 in the last round.

A Judicious Application

SHORTLY after I joined this newspaper as a boy, and while I still carried the importance of the Fourth Estate on my narrow shoulders, I paid a visit to my old high school.

The occasion was the annual track and field day—a time when relatively new "old boys" wander insouciantly about the grounds quietly checking to see if their former teachers accept them as near-adults.

In the course of the afternoon I engaged my old classics teacher in conversation, asking what great changes had occurred in the three years since I had been at school and how the immature young generation then in attendance responded to the disciplines of education. (At no period in life can a young shirt be tuffed more completely than during the first two or three years out of high school.)

Stott

My former classics teacher looked at me gravely, chewed the bottom of his moustache to avoid smiling at my apparent sense of self-importance, and replied:

"Stott, there is only one way in which Latin can be driven into some boys. That's by physical application to a certain part of their anatomy. And now they won't let us name the young rascals." Then he nodded formally, turned to stroll away and deep, rolling laughter rose from his chest.

Since that time I've often wondered about the good doctor's philosophical remarks on the theory of learning and education—remarks which I'm quite sure he didn't voice very seriously.

IF THE CHILD DOESN'T LEARN...

Against them I've balanced the familiar words that "if the child does not learn, the teacher has not taught." Quite possibly the two ideas are compatible.

If the classics teacher were to print out Latin vocabulary, grammar, declensions and conjugations on a broad paddle and bring the instrument into sharp contact with that part of a student immediately in front of his hip pockets, he might impress vocabulary, grammar, declensions and conjugations on an unwilling flesh. But the student would have to be a contortionist to see the impression in the first place, before transferring it to his brain.

On the other hand, dislike for the paddle might encourage the lazy pupil to dig into his studies and master his assignments to avoid punishment.

There isn't any simple, undeviating rule to be followed either way.

My friends in the teaching profession tell me endlessly of the difficulties they encounter with kids unable to assimilate the material presented in classes.

The teachers go to the point of calling in parents. When that course is justified, they tell fathers or mothers that their children just haven't the ability to keep up with the work. The answer, the teachers say, is all too often a protest from the parent.

"It isn't that my boy isn't bright enough," many of them contend, "it's just that he doesn't concentrate."

EXCUSES

There are a dozen variants. Another explains that the student didn't get along with a teacher—which is sometimes the case. Again, a parent will argue that an earlier and unsatisfactory teacher-student relationship left the child ill-equipped, deficient in basic preparation, for the advanced studies of the grade he currently occupies unsuccessfully.

There are cases where that is true—and teachers admit it. But more often tests have revealed that the youngster just hasn't the intelligence to cope. His IQ isn't high enough. Giving him advanced work is just like trying to decant a quart bottle into a pint. The "mickies" can't hold it.

When that's the case, no amount of caning, strapping or punishment is going to make the child learn.

This doesn't mean that a judicious application of discipline, even physically administered, can't do something for the kid who isn't trying.

Which brings us up to the conversation in town the other day on the virtues of returning to the strap as an aid to learning. Sometimes it will work. Sometimes it won't. In the mellowness of my age, I've come to the conclusion that it's best to use psychology as a rule, or a rule as psychology—one of those three-foot ones the building supply people give away for advertising. If you can't get that kind of a rule, a lath 16 inches long and rounded at the edges can be an effective aid to those disciplines so valuable in learning.

WHO ARE THEY?

'Real Owners' Of Polish Art Can Claim It

QUEBEC (CP)—No one but the "real owners" of the $50,000,000 Polish treasures can make the Quebec government give them up, Premier Duplessis says.

He did not say who he thought were the real owners of the treasures, stored away by the provincial government in 1947, but did say he will never return them to Poland so long as the country is Communist-dominated.

The costly array of jewels, tapestries, solid gold coronation garments of the ancient kings of Poland and religious objects were transported by provincial police from Hotel Dieu Hospital to the vault of the Provincial Museum on the Plains of Abraham in 1947.

The cloak-and-dagger operation took place on a cold winter night after Mr. Duplessis had received a written request to take the treasures into custody from the superior of the hospital operated by the cloistered order of nuns. The Polish government asked the order to take care of the treasures when the Second World War started.

Speaking Thursday night in the legislative assembly in answer to a question from Glen Brown (L-Brome), Mr. Duplessis said neither threats nor promises can make his change his mind.

MADE IN VAIN

He said many efforts have been made to arrange the return of the treasures to Poland, some of them by men of good faith, but they were made in vain.

Mr. Duplessis has often said previously he will not return the treasures, unless a competent court determines who are their rightful owners.

The subject of the treasures came up during discussion of budget estimates of the provincial secretary's department, which operates the provincial museum here.

Mr. Brown, asking whether the government was encountering any difficulties keeping the treasures, said he had read of alleged Communist plots to seize them.

"Since we had these treasures all kinds of efforts have been made, to get them back to Poland," Mr. Duplessis said. "I say they are staying here."

He said the government took over the treasures after complaints from hospital authorities that "federal government pressure" was being exerted to return the treasures to Poland.

The treasures are in 24 metal chests and a blue-painted wooden box. They are closely guarded and only about once a year are inspection parties permitted inside to check on their condition.

Peace-Hungry Mood

NEW YORK—The fearful, hopeful, peace-hungry mood of the United States was reflected at the Nobel Anniversary Dinner given Lester Pearson in New York.

It was reflected in tense atmosphere of the roof-top banquet room high above New York—tense because even higher overhead soared the Sputnik, and it was reflected in front page newspaper coverage the following morning. More unusual was the man-in-the-street interest shown in the fact that part of the proceedings were broadcast on the Mike Wallace TV show.

Wallace, as you may recall, made a national name for himself by specializing in have-you-stopped-beating-your-wife-type interviews. A few years ago this Nobel Dinner would have been a gathering of eggheads, mostly pinko foreigners at that, and a TV showman would have risked his rating on them. Now they're the hoped for saviors of the world.

Mr. Pearson, by the way, threw Messrs. Wallace and Phillip Morris into a flap when he declined to be interviewed by the famous inquisitor after the inquisitor had announced that he would. In the end Lord John Orr of Britain successfully met the challenge and Mr. Pearson made a statement.

IN THE VALLEY

In his main address, Mr. Pearson warned against a Summit meeting until there have been full discussions "in the valley" at the "warmer and more productive levels." In this he's probably not too far from the position of President Eisenhower who also stressed the need for preliminary meetings before the assault on the Summit.

Pearson called for a steady Western position, not attempting in panic to match every Russian achievement, keeping up strength, but constantly seeking agreement. And he warned against the "ostrich policy" assuming a "posture which is both vulgar and vulnerable" or else "rushing madly around... eyes wild and wings flapping."

And he conjured up a vivid and horrible image of the future world if there is no agreement... "A lifeless lump of rock rushing through space."

Less publicity was received by the great speech of Lord John Boyd Orr, the first director-general of the UN Food and Health Organization and one of the most forceful men of the world international scene. Each man gave a speech characteristic of his background and experience.

Pearson is a diplomat and he based his appeal on discussions, logic and common sense. I think I'm correct in suggesting that Mr. Pearson's approach is "reach agreement, then action" will be possible.

Boyd Orr is a farmer, a production man, and an outspoken crag-faced Scot. His philosophy might be summed up as "do something. Action will breed confidence."

He proposed that the nations reduce their defence spending by 10 per cent, that half this be used to reduce taxes and the other half be put into a fund for world economic development.

The 76-year-old Scot was interviewed by Wallace and proved a good match for the slick young inquisitor. He was asked if he favored recognition of Communist China, a hot question in the United States. Boyd Orr cut him short and barked "naturally." Rolling his r's explosively. "The United States is isolating itself from world public opinion."

NO FAITH

Boyd Orr having stressed the need for talking to the Russians, Wallace asked him: "Do you trust the Russians?"

"I wouldn't put faith in the Foreign Service Officers of my own country," exploded the old gentleman.

He said that international agreements shouldn't be based on trust but on "intelligent self interest."

And he said something else that was thought provoking and that was that war can be ended "when the people of the world demand it."

But perhaps the most conspicuous thing about the Nobel Evening was that none of these great men, their discussions augmented by messages from colleagues abroad, came up with anything radically new. In fact it just boiled down to "common sense" which is unfortunately one of the world's most uncommon commodities.

It made me realize that there is no formula for peace, no simple solution, nothing much perhaps that any one man can do. On the other hand, as Lord Boyd Orr said, if the people of the world decide they want peace, they'll get it.

Radio Call System

MONTREAL (CP)—The Queen Elizabeth Hospital Thursday installed a new call system, believed the first in Canada, which eliminates the public address sound system to summon doctors or other staff members. They are called instead by means of five-ounce receiving sets which they carry and which pick signals from a central broadcasting unit.

Fake Bomb Scare At Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—A bomb scare sent armed National Guardsmen swarming through Central High School here Thursday night, but a search of the huge brick building—centre of a race integration dispute last fall—apparently uncovered no explosive.

The militia troops found "no indication of any evidence" of a bombing, a spokesman for the Arkansas military district said.

About an hour before the soldiers arrived at the campus, military authorities, Little Rock police headquarters and a newspaper had received anonymous telephone calls that "something was going to happen to Central High School."

"They're from out of town; they're going to blow up the school," a woman caller shouted almost hysterically into a reporter's ear.

LECTURER'S OPINION

Canadian Writers Mostly 'Hopeless'

By TONY DICKASON

About 90 per cent of Canadian freelance writers are "completely hopeless."

They don't know what to write, or how to write it.

Authority for this is Dr. Douglas Leechman, a man of many parts, former senior anthropologist of the National Museum of Canada, Ottawa.

Dr. Leechman also writes. He describes it as his "second love" after anthropology.

The pleasant, 67-year-old English-born man has had "several hundred" magazine articles published, books, and has taught embryo writers their business-to-be.

WRITE FOR MONEY

Dr. Leechman, also instructor of journalism at Carleton College, Ottawa, following 31 years as an anthropologist, is currently lecturing at Victoria College on freelance writing which, in effect, is how to write for money.

He answers this succinctly: "Give the editor something above average that appeals to the majority of readers."

This is tough. There are "very few" in Canada, as writers, who can make a living doing this.

Dental Mechanics To Meet Martin Urge Ban Lifted

Officials of the Dental Technicians Society which is endeavoring to make it legal for a public dentist to deal directly with the public rather than through dentists were to meet with Health Minister Eric Martin on the question today.

After the meeting it will be disclosed that a member of the government will present a bill allowing direct public dealings.

At the same time, a special minority report regarding the government appointed inquiry into the denture problem will be made public.

There has been agitation for years to allow an individual to deal directly with a denture technician in getting false teeth, or having dentures repaired.

Several denturists have been charged in the courts with practicing dentistry.

The Victoria Labor Council has gone on record as opposing the costs of dentures charged by dentists, believing that the dental technicians can handle such work directly and for less.

Food for Spacemen Under Research

LONDON (AP)—Soviet biologists Wednesday night were reported developing a new food for spacemen that produces oxygen in addition to satisfying hunger.

Moscow radio said it is an algae seaweed called chlorella which feeds on carbon dioxide and thus would thrive on exhaled human breath.

Saanich Court Dismisses Illegal Dentistry Charge

A charge of practicing dentistry illegally against Norman Mallard, 290 Burnside, was dismissed Thursday in Saanich police court.

Judgment was given by Magistrate H. C. Hall after hearing the case last week.

He said the crown had produced insufficient evidence to prove its case.

Private detective Robert Charles Blisshen, Vancouver, said he went to Mallard's office to have a denture plate repaired after being instructed to get evidence on Mallard by the College of Dental Surgeons.

Two teeth were replaced, the plate was fitted to Blisshen's mouth and a $5 fee charged. The investigator asked for a receipt and the man, who said he didn't usually provide receipts because it took too much time, signed the paper N. Mallard.

Blisshen's wife, who accompanied him to the dental technician's office at 290 Burnside, also gave evidence. She said the man who she and her husband knew as Mallard looked in her mouth and said she required some dental work before she could be provided with dentures.

She and her husband said he offered to do the mechanical work after the dental work was done by someone else.

But when it came time to identify the man in court, Blisshen refused to name anyone positively, and his wife pointed out the wrong man.

Defence counsel George Gregory was absent at this week's session but Robert Harvey appeared on his behalf.

It was not made clear at the first or second hearing whether the accused had been present when evidence was taken.

Thursday, Mr. Harvey brought the accused to court but did not wish to place him on the witness stand.

The case was closed without additional evidence.

6-MONTH-OLD MICKEY MADE REAL NICE 'DOLL'

GOSHEN, Ind. (AP)—When principal John Larimer saw the "doll" that Louise Martin, eight, brought to school Thursday, he promptly took it home to Louise's mother.

The "doll" was a cousin, six-month-old Mickey, left for care in Louise's home while the baby's mother was at work.

Saanichton Bay Called 'Logical' Ferry Terminus

SAANICHTON — Logical western terminus for a fast ferry service between the Saanich Peninsula and lower mainland is Saanichton Bay, Central Saanich council decided this week.

Saanich Pioneer R. W. Sluggett Succumbs at 91

Robert William Sluggett, 91, resident of the Brentwood district for 82 years, died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. D. Kelly, 1431 Harrop Road.

Born in Chesley, Ontario, he lived at West Saanich Road and Wallace Drive, and could recall his family having owned 1,000 acres in the area.

Surviving are three sons, Gilbert and Brian, Brentwood, and Clifford, Powell River; five daughters, Mrs. L. Buckle, Mrs. Kelly, and Mrs. J. D. McKinnell, Victoria; Mrs. E. V. Apps, Mission; and Mrs. C. W. Serie, Encinitas, Calif.; 19 grandchildren, a great-granddaughter, and a brother, Fred J. Sluggett, Brentwood.

Funeral will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. at Sluggett Memorial Baptist Church, Brentwood, and interment will be at Shady Creek Cemetery. Sands have charge of arrangements.

15 of 18 Groups In Nanaimo Back United Appeal

NANAIMO — Establishment of a United Appeal has been approved by 15 of the 18 organizations represented in preliminary discussions.

Rex Covey, pro tem chairman, and the group steering committee were ordered to name a nominating committee to have a slate of officers ready for a vote Feb. 5.

Mr. Covey was asked to suggest to the city council that all 17 of the applications before the council for tag days be granted.

Mayor Pete Maffeo said the city can control the number of tag days granted in a year, but has no control of house-to-house canvasses.

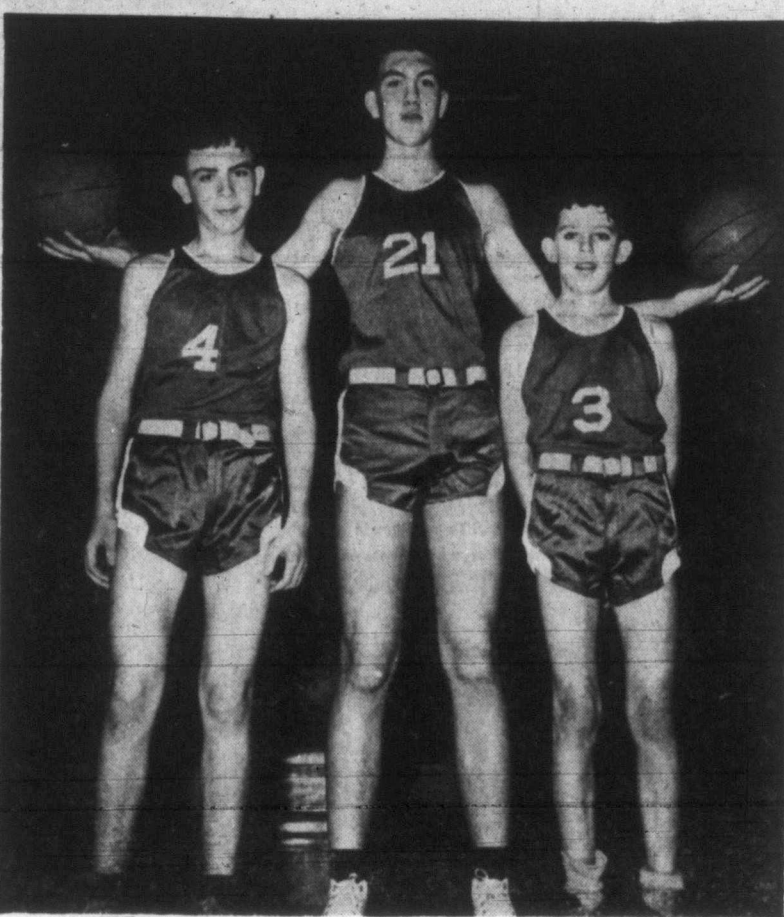

Scottish Give Blood To Tune of Bagpipes

NANAIMO — Mid-Island Council, Knights of Columbus, won a Junior Chamber of Commerce shield for the second time by leading all groups in donating blood to a Red Cross clinic this week.

Donations reached a record of 762 pints. The K of C lodge contributed 50 pints of blood. Trainees at the Dominion-Provincial Vocational Training School gave 46 pints, and Harmac workers gave 37 pints.

More than 20 Hungarian immigrants appeared at the clinic with an interpreter, and 12 members of "B" Company, Canadian Scottish Regiment, marched to the clinic to the music of their own pipes and drums.

'MADE IN U.S.' GIFT UPSETS NEW TRUSTEE

NANAIMO (CP) — Newly elected school trustee F. E. O. Murphy is prepared to look his gift horses in the mouth. Peering into the depths of a handsome brief case presented him as a board member, Mr. Murphy found a "Made in U.S.A." label.

He promptly gave notice of plans to call on the board to buy goods and materials made in Canada whenever possible.

Imitations Curtailed

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Japanese government Thursday took steps to put a stop to exports of cigarette cases and lighters made to resemble well-known foreign makes. The ministry announced that exports of these commodities will henceforth require approval by licence.

MURDER-SUICIDE, SAY POLICE

Mother, Infant Found Dead in Car

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — The body of a woman clutching her dead baby in her arms was found Thursday in the garage of a home here.

Police said they consider it to be a murder and suicide. Mrs. James O'Connor, mother of six children, was found dead in the back seat of a car parked in the garage at her home. Clutched in her arms was the body of her five-months-old baby girl.

FOUND BY HER HUSBAND

The discovery was made by Mr. O'Connor when he returned home for lunch and found the car motor running and the garage doors stuffed with blankets. An inhalator crew failed to revive the woman and baby.

Pump Failure Blamed In Gassing

DUNCAN (CP) — Escaping chlorine gas, which hit 19 workers at the B.C. Forest Products pulp mill at Crofton Wednesday, was caused by the failure of a pump, a company spokesman said Thursday.

"The pump failure caused the chlorine to back up in the line and become free in the area where the workmen were engaged," he said. "This type of failure while equipment and installations are under test is not unexpected."

"Under normal conditions the chlorine should have been cut off when the pump went out of commission. But it is well that this type of failure should be caught during test, when this type of occurrence is effects of the chlorine gas, only."

Of the 19 men exposed to the three needed hospital treatment. One of these, J. D. Kaiser, a B.C. Forest Products employee, was released Wednesday.

Two men, Charles Stewart, 50, and Dan Moroz, 59, were still in hospital Thursday. The hospital reported they would most likely be kept in hospital for another day at least, but their condition is satisfactory.

WEIR HEADS SCHOOL BOARD

LANGFORD — New chairman of Sooke School Board is Ronald J. Weir, Metchosin, elected at the inaugural meeting of the board this week to replace Trustee John S. Williams.

$450,000 Plan For New Schools

NANAIMO — School Inspector Claude Campbell has recommended to trustees of Nanaimo School District 68 that $450,000 in school building requirements be undertaken this year.

In a by-law last month voters authorized spending of $840,000 over a three-year period.

A priority list will be sent to the education department as follows: Seven-room addition to John Barsby School; new eight-room school in Brechin; addition of three classrooms and an office at Mount Benson School; addition of two classrooms at Departure Bay, and addition of one classroom at North Cedar, Chase River and Gabriola.

A secondary program to assist the "do it now" program of government and labor was proposed by Trustee Frank Murphy, and won the unanimous support of the board. As a result, works superintendent James Thorpe was ordered to draw up a program of necessary maintenance, repair, and decoration that can be done in the "off season."

Board chairman Mrs. Marion Richer named committee chairmen as follows: Ted Barsby, finance; Gordon Mackay, social; Nat Martin, buildings; Mr. Murphy, maintenance; Arthur Day, transportation; George Hoggan, purchasing; Dr. Keith S. Ketchen, education; Mr. Barsby, salaries.

LIKES MONA LISA FACE, BUT . . .

'E Ain't Done Me Body So Well, Says Girl Model

LONDON (UP)—Strip tease artist Georgina Moore scandalized the tomb-like atmosphere of a London art gallery today by practically unveiling herself while a new portrait of Princess Margaret was being unveiled.

Georgina did it for reasons that were partly altruistic. She has the same measurements as the princess (36-22-36) and posed for the body. She took off her fur coat and jacket to show that whatever was wrong with the picture, wasn't her fault.

"It's 'er face, but the rest of 'er is me," Georgina, a 20-year-old Cockney showgirl, told reporters earlier. Then they informed her the portrait made the princess appear flat chested with a swan-like neck and Georgina was one of the first on hand today to look at the picture.

Georgina was as critical as anybody going to the Thomas Agnew Galleries for the 9 a.m. unveiling. She approved of Princess Margaret's face but the body . . .

"'E ain't done me body so well in this one," she said. "But 'e done a smashing nude of me."

Georgina appears in the forward line of a local nude show in which she wears no more than "A G-string and nipple caps—and sometimes feathers on me 'ead."

What struck laymen (and Georgina) about the picture was that it gave the princess a swan neck and made her flat-chested.

"You'd think a painter would want to put that part in big," Georgina said. "After all, I got me job in the show coz I'm comfortable."

The painting was hung against a background of torn and moth-eaten red velvet and was in a gold-black frame. About 30 customers and about 40 newsmen were crowded in front of it. Two husky doormen stood guard nearby.

A young art student who did not want to give his name said he only came in to see if the picture was flat chested.

Comments from the "over 50" age group watching the picture ranged from "One of the best portraits I have ever seen" to "Good Lord, her face is blue" and "Just look at that right hand—it's pure renaissance."

One young woman wearing a green hat, beige coat, red shoes and a blue handbag, said "Of course it's just like her—except for that dreadful hair style."

SAFECRACKERS IN NAME ONLY

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Safecrackers just aren't what they used to be.

That's the opinion of detective Jim Maher, who investigated a safe-cracking case. The yeggs spent about half an hour "peeling open" a safe which contained only index cards.

To top it all off Maher reported the safe:

1. Had a "for sale" sign taped on top of it.
2. Had the combination numbers listed on top.
3. Was unlocked.

110-Volt Shock in Mouth Sends Infant to Hospital

In good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital today after mauling 110-volt shock Wednesday is Norman Schnautz, 18 months.

Norman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Schnautz, Hillside Auto Court, received severe tongue and lip burns when he put a plugged-in cord into his mouth. The "do-it-yourself" alteration in a Christmas tree light cord had been left by a previous tenant in the auto court. It was lying on the floor with one end plugged into a wall socket. The extension was termed a "warned over and over."

Muddy BCE Project Protested

B.C. Electric Co. officials will investigate complaints of Quadra Street residents that mud and deep ditches are blocking access to their homes.

Complaints were made by a few residents and business proprietors in the 33-3400 block where the company is constructing a trench for its 132,000-volt underground circuit.

A company official said contractors have completed most of the "messy" work in connection with the trench.

He said a portion of the trench had to be dug deeper so that the cable would be level as possible with other portions of the line. Blasting also became necessary when rock was encountered, he said.

DOUBLE SWINDLE

$100 Bill Confederate, Counterfeit

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—For a filling station attendant, at first it was just a question of changing a $100 U.S. bill for services rendered to an American tourist.

Then he discovered the bill was confederate money; and, later, it was counterfeit confederate money.

Mrs. Patricia Whitehurst, an American travelling to Alaska to join her husband, palmed off the bogus $100 bill on a gas station attendant four miles north of here.

The victimized attendant pulled the woman's car from a ditch, filled the tank, and gave her $80 change. He watched her drive away before he noticed something was wrong with the bill.

RCMP arrested the woman 160 miles further north and brought her back to Prince George to be charged with uttering a counterfeit bill.

She was remanded eight days for sentence after pleading guilty.

Radar System Gets Support Of City CO

Commanding officer of Victoria's 2455 Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, RCAF, Sqdn. Ldr. R. D. Higgins, Thursday, took issue with those who criticize Canada's radar warning systems.

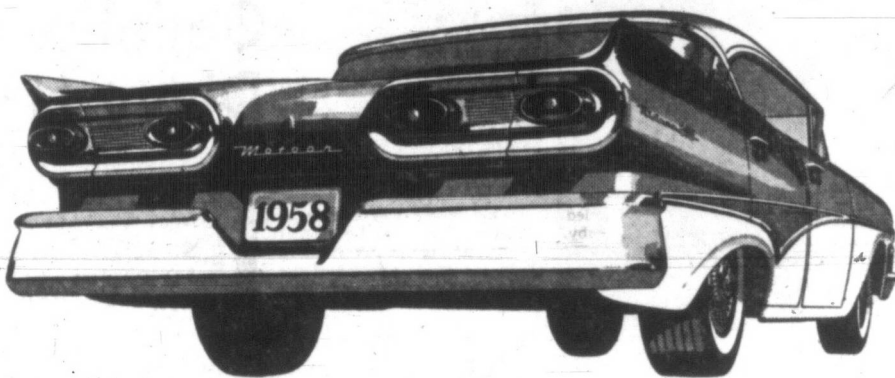

Addressing the Victoria "Y" Men's Club, he pointed out that "these lines are purely warning systems and in that role are still effective. They were not designed to turn back attack themselves. That is the job of the interceptor fighter squadrons."

One of Canada's best defence investments are trained fighter control operators as, familiar with radar, communications and navigation, they were in a perfect position to convert to either controlling missiles or operating anti-missile equipment, he said.

Performs in a BOLD new way

The Magnificent 1958 Meteor V-8 or 6

ONE OF FORD OF CANADA'S FINE CARS

The Magnificent 1958 Meteor Introduces a Bold New Concept in Performance—a Bold New Step in Economy.

Not for 25 years has there been a V-8 so entirely new. Meteor's all-new Tempest V-8's deliver up to 303 hp., yet are so smooth a coin will balance on the front fender while the engine is running. Tempest V-8's conquer the steepest hills with hardly a deep breath—and thanks to new Precision Fuel Induction, fuel-air mixture zooms through 8 expressways directly to the cylinder head—saves gas—gives overdrive economy. Meteor's Thrifty-Six is new and wonderful, too—now packing 145 eager horses.

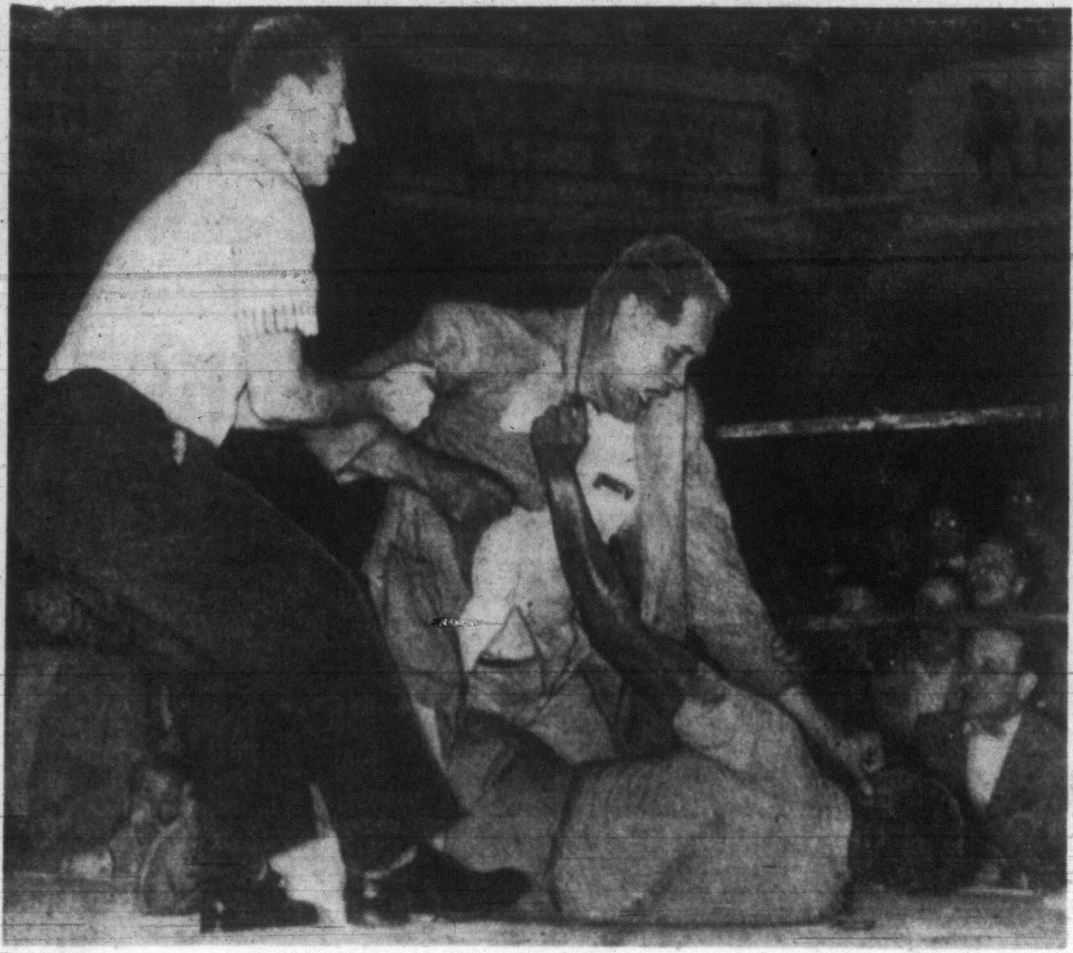

Matching new Meteor engines in performance is Meteor's triple line-up of transmissions, including the all-new Multi-Drive Merc-O-Matic. Here is the first automatic drive where you can select from three forward ranges. Power and torque is tailored to every driving condition. Standard Merc-O-Matic and manual shifting also available.

This is the bold new performance Meteor brings to the low price field. Want to try it? Just see your Meteor dealer tomorrow and drive the new Meteor—new, in a bold new way.

(Certain features illustrated or mentioned are standard on some models, optional at extra cost on others.)

Unidentified fan wrestles referee John Thomas to canvas following fourth round of hectic boxing match between Al Gutierrez and L. C. Morgan at Los Angeles Thursday night. It Was a Daffy Hassle 'Ere L. C. Fell Off Stool

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The scheduled main attraction was relegated to virtual obscurity at Olympic Auditorium Thursday night when 4,200 fans went daffy over the preposterous goings-on in the 10-round semi-main event. It was this latter engagement that produced these items:

1. One fighter was knocked down between rounds.
2. At one point both combatants were on the floor simultaneously.
3. The referee was attacked in the ring by a spectator.
4. The matchmaker eventually got into the ring himself to protect the referee.
5. The fight ended when one of the participants fell off his stool.

Nancy Biggest Threat To May's Title Hopes

May Wong could be in for a rough trip when she sets out to defend her Victoria women's singles table tennis championship Jan. 24 and 25 with the announcement that perennial title Nancy Craig has thrown her hat in the ring, following a one-year absence from action. Men's champion, Art Ngai, is not expected to defend his title. This will have the effect of throwing the tourney into a wide-open race with several entrants having good chances of winning the men's crown. A new category of play has been announced for the tourney.

FOR BEGINNERS
With the novice class becoming so good that they can threaten the seniors, an event for "beginners" has been created.

This is for people who have just started the game, and would like to try tournament play for the first time. Other events scheduled will be the junior singles, championship double, "A" singles and doubles and novice and senior singles. Further information may be obtained by phoning Val Druce at 7-3422.

Dates were announced Thursday night for the B.C. Centenary Table Tennis Tourney which will also be held in Victoria March 21 and 22, following the Western Canada Championships slated for Vancouver Feb. 1 and 2.

In local league play last week, Farmers fell by a 10-8 count to division "A" leading Strathcona Hotel, while Heaneys beat Island Tug, 13-11, and Tigers defeated Dodgers, 18-6.

In "B" division, Rangers bounced Regals, 33-17, while Flyers defeated Braces, 22-18.

Marlene Cards Nine-Over 82

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Mrs. Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto, shot a nine-over-par 82 Thursday in the first round of the Tampa women's open golf tournament to barely stay among the first 20 players. Winds up to 25 miles an hour and chilly weather around the 50-degree mark raised the scores on several other pre-tournament favorites besides Mrs. Streit, the Canadian and former U.S. amateur women's champion.

Ruth Jensen of Seattle, took a two-stroke lead with a one-over-par 74.

Defending champion Betsy Rawls shot 76 to tie for second place with Patty Berg, another former winner here, and Beverly Hanson.

Sport's Glory Road Sometimes Has No Tomorrow

OSCAR FRALEY
NEW YORK (UP)—The case of Jimmy Foxx proved again today what those who travel the glory road so often forget—that as far as big money talent is concerned there often comes a time when there is no tomorrow.

The baseball world was startled when old "Double X" disclosed that he was on a financial spot. His rent is five months overdue and the three-time most valuable player in American League stands on the threshold of poverty.

"The money I lost—and blew—was my own fault, 99 per cent of it," he said.

Which too often is the case among those for whom it was easy come, easy go. In the case of Foxx, who hit more home runs than any other man except Babe Ruth, it was too many unwise investments.

It was ever thus for too many of the big money men of sports, dazzled by the brightness of today's sun and unable to realize that it would not shine endlessly. You could get this sort of tragic

High-Scoring Scottish Tackle Tils Saturday

Already assured of a place in the finals of the Victoria and District Football Association after winning the first-half title, Tillums will have their work cut out for them Saturday when they play Canadian Scottish at Royal Athletic Park.

Scots, sparked by the scoring feats of centre forward Bill Ackinchose, have been travelling at a five-goals-per-game pace in their first four outings in the second half of the league schedule.

They will be attempting to erase the two-point margin between themselves and pace-setting Brodies Bakery.

Brodies, in turn, will be trying to stretch their lead when they meet Canadian Hungarians at Topaz Park Sunday, while Gorge takes on Esquimalt at Heywood Avenue Park.

In a third game Sunday, Punjab United will tackle Victoria

U.S. Hockey Reps Beaten

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP)—Fort Frances Canadians beat the U.S. national hockey team 4-3 Thursday night to sweep a two-game series with the club that will represent the U.S. in the world championships this year.

The Canadians, a senior club with some players remaining from the Allan Cup championship squad of 1952, drew three penalties to the visitors' one as they played under international rules.

Bruins Didn't Help Lum Prove Point

Boston Errors Spoil Harry's Return to NHL

By The Canadian Press
Two veteran goaltenders faced each other Thursday night as they tried to prove they still belong in the National Hockey League. In one sense, neither outshone the other—both made 26 stops—but the New York Rangers in front of Gump Worsley scored one more goal than the Boston Bruins and won, 3-2.

Rangers took advantage of defensive lapses for two of their goals against Harry Lumley, a one-time familiar face in the NHL.

Lumley first stepped on NHL ice 14 years ago, playing two games with Detroit Red Wings in 1943-44 and landing a permanent job there the next season.

He stayed with Wings for six seasons, spent two with Chicago Black Hawks, then moved to Toronto Maple Leafs, where he had the best seasons of his career. In 1953-54 he captured the Vezina Trophy, awarded to the player with least goals against.

At the other end of the rink Worsley was taking over from Marcel Paille, whose initial lustre apparently had worn off. Paille returned to take Worsley's place with Providence Reds of the American League.

Two other games were played. Montreal Canadiens maintained their league-leading pace with a 5-2 victory over Toronto, while Detroit continued to atone for their early-season slump, edging Chicago 3-2. Wings now have 43 points, one ahead of Rangers and 18 behind Canadiens. The Bruins and Leafs are tied for fourth with 37, three ahead of last-place Hawks.

Larry Poppo scored his seventh goal of the season late in the final period to give Rangers' margin. Earlier, Red Sullivan picked up a loose puck in front of the Boston net and sent a 10-footer home and Andy Bathgate got his 14th goal of the season after Jerry Toppazzini lost the puck while trying to kill a penalty.

Bruins got their goals in the second period. Gerry Ehman and Flem Mackell doing the honors. The game was Ehman's first in the NHL.

FAMILIAR ROLE

Dickie Moore was a star at Montreal in his familiar role as Toronto's nemesis. He got two goals, his 22nd and 23rd of the season and his 99th and 100th in six seasons of NHL play. Another Montreal big gun, Bernie Gorman Geoffrion got the 199th goal of his career. Henri Richard and Andre Pronovost also contributed to the Montreal total while George Armstrong and Barry Cullen hit pay-dirt for Leafs.

Alex Delvecchio's two goals were the big factor in Detroit as the Wings marked their fifth straight victory. And he did it the hard way—setting up both his own goals by stealing the puck from Chicago players in their own zone and then beating goalie Glenn Hall.

Flyers Also Want Kilburn

The line in front of the Victoria Hockey Club door is still forming as owners and managers continue to make offers for the services of Colin Kilburn.

Latest to join in the bidding was general manager, Bud Poile, of Edmonton Flyers, offering a pair of undisclosed players.

Poile's bid followed those tendered by Vancouver's Coley.

Hall, Seattle's Keith Allen, Hal Laycoe of New Westminster and an early offer by Frank Currie of Calgary Stampede.

This morning, Cougar manager Fred Mackenzie stated that none of the deals had been closed and that he thought that it would be at least another day before any definite news could be forthcoming.

OTHER DEALS

He added that there were a number of other player deals in the fire and that word of them could be completed before anything is finalized on the Kilburn negotiations.

Kilburn learned most of his hockey in Edmonton and first broke into the ranks of the professionals there when he joined Flyers for the 1951-52 season.

He joined up with the Cougars in the fall of 1952-53 and has been with them for the past six years.

His best season for the Cats was in 1955-56 when he tallied with 43 goals and 38 assists for a total of 81 points, prior to taking over the coaching and managing duties the following season.

Change Tournery Rules Hockey Boss Suggests

LONDON (CP)—The world amateur hockey championship rules should be changed to give weaker countries a chance to win something, J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Association, said Thursday.

Commenting on a report that 10 countries have entered the 1958 championship to be held in Oslo Feb. 28-March 9, he said: "That is a good postwar average, but the present rules should be changed to attract more of the 'no-hopers' in future years."

"At present too many of the weaker ice hockey nations do not compete because they have got no chance against the 'big five'."

The big five are Sweden, Canada, Russia, Czechoslovakia and the United States.

"I would like to see the rules changed so that the championships became three competitive groups."

FOR ALL-STAR GAME

Frick Plans Player Vote

BALTIMORE (AP)—Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick told the Baltimore Evening Sun Thursday he is leaning toward a plan to have the players instead of fans do the voting for the all-star teams.

The annual game between picked squads of the American and National Leagues is to be played this year in Baltimore July 8.

A change from the fan poll has been talked about since last year when hundreds of thousands of ballots poured in from Cincinnati and resulted in seven of the Redlegs getting the most votes in the National League.

Frick arbitrarily eliminated Gus Bell and Wally Post from the starting lineup and replaced them with Willie Mays of New York Giants and Henry Aaron of Milwaukee.

"I am inclined now toward an idea of letting the players in their respective leagues vote for all-adversary teams with these selections being tabulated to determine the makeup of each league's squad," Frick told baseball writer James Ellis. By picking only best opponents, players could not vote for themselves or teammates.

Frick said he wants to talk with presidents Will Harridge of the American League and Warren Giles of the National League before proposing the player-voting plan, probably at a joint meeting of the majors Jan. 25 in New York.

No Wonder Shelley Picked Up

TIJUANA, Mexico (UP)—The PGA added insult to injury today when it fined Shelley Mayfield, member professional, $100 for failing to finish his round in the recent $50,000 Bing Crosby national pro-amateur tournament.

Mayfield picked up, and here is why: "I shot a 42 on the first nine holes at Pebble Beach. On the 10th hole, I faded my drive over the cliff down among the rocks on the beach."

"I had to stand with one foot 'way up in the air to hit the ball. It bounced against a rock, came back and struck me in the chest. From my chest, the ball bounced against another rock and came flying back at me and hit me in the foot."

"There is a two-stroke penalty for your own golf ball hits you. So that one swing of the club cost me five strokes."

"In the interest of speeding up play I put the ball in my pocket."

Nanaimo Rink Favored To Keep Title

Full-scale action got under way this afternoon in the Vancouver Island zone playdowns at the Victoria Curling Club.

Eight rinks, two each from Victoria, Nanaimo, the Alberni Valley and Duncan, will be aiming for the honor of representing the Island at the B.C. ladies' finals, slated for Kelowna.

Mrs. Marg Fuller's Nanaimo rink, defending Western Canada champion, is favored to retain the Island title.

Victoria entries, Mrs. Mary Beatty and Mrs. Ruby Cooper opened their play Wednesday with Mrs. Beatty taking a 16-3 decision.

Other rinks entered are Mrs. D. Ferguson and Mrs. E. Southern from the Alberni Valley and Mrs. B. Gilday and Mrs. H. Berkley from Duncan.

Tonight's other draw will be tonight at 9 p.m., with Saturday's coming at 2, 4.30 and 9, and the final draw Sunday at 9 a.m.

Pete May Tackle Heavy King Again

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—Pete Rademacher is going to fight Floyd Patterson for the world's heavyweight championship again.

That is, if he doesn't get bumped off by some unknown fighter during his European boxing tour in February and March.

"These fights, slated for my tour, are real fights," said Rademacher. "I want to prove to myself that I can go 10 rounds. I believe I can and I'm confident of beating any man in the world, including Floyd Patterson."

The 1957 Olympic champion said he didn't mean to be critical of the men who took charge of his training for the title fight which he lost to Patterson last Aug. 22 at Seattle. "They trained me according to the way they do professionals, but I knew better than anyone in my camp what I needed to do before that fight. They wouldn't let me..."

Rademacher contended he wanted to box and do road work until the day before the fight but trainers—he had no manager—insisted that he lay off three days preceding the title go because they feared he'd go stale.

"Next time I'll know better," the 28-year-old boxer said at a local gymnasium where he's been training for more than a month.

Does Pete Rademacher really believe that he'll fight Patterson again?

"I sure do," replied the 215-pound former army lieutenant who was boxing instructor at Fort Benning, near here, until his discharge early last year. "In fact, Cus D'Amato, manager of Patterson, has already promised me a return fight with the champion and Floyd and I shook hands on it."

D'Amato has said several times that Rademacher could whip Eddie Machen, the top-ranked heavyweight contender. He also thinks Pete could beat Zora Folley, the No. 2 contender.

Rademacher believes he'll fight for the heavyweight title next summer.

JBAA Tests Wanderers In City Rugby Feature

Victoria rugby fans will have their choice of three matches and at three parks Saturday.

Oak Bay Wanderers will be out to consolidate their first place standing over JBAA firsts at Windsor Park.

Wanderers will be going for their third straight win over the oarsmen, who started their training late in the season but have been showing greater strength with each outing.

In the second division, Victoria College will lay its two game win streak on the line against Wanderers' seconds at Carnarvon Park.

Second division JBAA will play HMCS Naden at the Colville Road pitch.

Naden has not entered the league and the game will be an exhibition encounter.

JBAA players are asked to assemble at HMC Dockyard gate at 1.30.

JBAA Firsts—Doug Brown, Gerry Sylvester, Pete Barry, Reg Lott, Ray Ramsay, Frank Gower, Harry Turner, Mel Davidson, Crash McKay, Harry Millard, Dave Cook, Bob Abbott, Vic Stodell.

St. John's Stretches

Badminton Win Streak
Fifth Division St. John's stretched their Lower Island Badminton League win streak to seven games Wednesday night, when they travelled to defeat Cordova Bay by a count of nine games to seven.

In the Fourth Division, it was Saanichton 10 and Duncan 6.

SPUTNIK IN TV BOW ON ALASKA STATION

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—Television station KFAR-TV Wednesday night telecast a live picture of the second Russian earth satellite, Sputnik II, as it passed over this far northern city at 4:25 p.m.

Station technical personnel positioned a television camera on its back atop the building housing KFAR-TV and picked up the satellite for four minutes. The satellite's rocket was visible for a minute. Calls to the station after the telecast indicated that the picture of the satellite came through clearly on home screens.

'Freedom of Cats' Upheld by Council

City council voted Thursday to ensure the freedom of cats. When the new pound and regulation by-law was introduced, Ald. M. H. Mooney asked insertion of a clause limiting the number of cats which may be kept in any one home, to five.

TO MAKE SURVEY—Prof. Gordon Huxon of the University of Western Ontario at London has been named by Prime Minister Diefenbaker to make a study of old age security programs. The 44-year-old economist and barrister will make a special trip to Washington to study the United States program. (C.P.)

World Religion Observance Set for Sunday

Bahai Faith's ninth annual world religion day will be observed here in the board room of the Dominion Hotel Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Anne McGee, Victoria, will address the open meeting.

Purpose of the day, Mrs. A. L. Greenwood, secretary of Victoria Bahai group, said, is "to bring about a clearer understanding of the world's great religions and of the basic unity of the original teachings laid down by their respective founders."

Visiting Nature Photographer Keeps Young at 65, Tells How

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Bert Harwell, veteran U.S. nature photographer and explorer visiting Victoria today has no prescription for longevity, but one for keeping men 65 years and over "peppy and young."

"Give yourself an objective," said the 71-year-old naturalist who filmed some of Walt Disney's "Vanishing Prairie." "Keep busy the year round."

"At 65, I refused to resign myself to planting petunias," he added. "I've worked ever since."

Mr. Harwell showed his spectacular movie "Forgotten Country" to a capacity audience at the Oak Bay Junior auditorium Wednesday. The film-lecture was sponsored by the Victoria Natural History Society and the Audubon Society of Canada.

The white-haired naturalist, regarded as one of the toughest and hardest men in his profession, has given himself a grueling objective this year. It would take the strength of a younger man.

He plans to travel alone by car about 4,500 miles to lecture in some 200 cities in the 10 Canadian provinces.

"If there is no restriction there can be no control," agreed Ald. W. H. Wilson. She recalled how officials removed 70 cats from one home last year. She pointed out the deed was only possible because of public indignation and the owner's consent.

Ald. A. I. Curtis said the limitation would be impossible to enforce. Only Ald. Wilson, Ald. Mooney and Ald. D. J. Proudfoot supported the limitation. They were overruled when the mayor broke a tie in a 4-3 vote.

Researchers Say Expenses Not Unusual

OTTAWA (CP)—The Defence Research Board said Thursday a sum of $6,000,000 spent by the defence department on an electronic trainer project that was abandoned "is far from an unusual expenditure."

"A number of marked benefits have accrued from the project, notably improved techniques and what is even more important the training of additional urgently-needed scientific and technical personnel," the board said.

While $6,000,000 was a large amount of money, the project involved development of unusually complex electronic computing equipment. In addition the services of specialized personnel were required.

Editor of Maclean's Appointed Director

TORONTO (CP)—Ralph Allen, editor of Maclean's Magazine, has been appointed a director of Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company which publishes the magazine, company president Floyd S. Chalmers announced today.

A former newspaper man in Winnipeg, Mr. Allen joined Maclean's in 1945 as an assistant editor. He became editor in 1950.

Trade Licence Bills Sent Out to 4,500

Almost 4,500 trade licence bills went out from City Hall this week, representing an assessment of $300,000 on city business.

Due date is Thursday but trade licence collector William Wallis said in view of the business tax levy being made so late in 1957, no action will likely be taken if the trade licences are paid before the end of February.

He pointed out trade licences are now paid on an annual basis instead of semi-annually as in past years. All businesses are required to purchase a trade licence. The fee is credited toward business tax which is collectable in July.

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia to Kenneth Robertson, age 11, of Kernersville, N.C., for his question:

How does the oyster develop?

The oyster begins life as an egg. Its parents are very fussy about the temperature of the water when they launch their young. It must be between 66 and 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Off New England, egg laying season starts in early July. In the Gulf of Mexico it goes on from March to November.

Each egg is a cell from a Mama Oyster and a Papa Oyster. Mama pours up to nine million of her egg cells into the water at one time. Papa's sperm cells are also poured into the water. Some of the male and female cells meet and pair off to form eggs. These little eggs measure about 500 to an inch. Strange to say, by next season the mother oyster may have changed into a father oyster. During the winter, the father oyster may turn into a mother. Each year this turn-about happens to about one parent oyster in 10.

The floating cells and the eggs in the water live a very dangerous life. They drift with the plankton, the sea food salad of algae and tiny creatures which is the staple diet for many fish. All the single cells perish and most of the egg cells. Only one little egg in four million has a chance to grow up.

About five hours after each egg is formed it hatches. It is now a glassy little larva. In a day and a half, each tiny larva begins to build its house. Six days later, the soft little body is shut inside two fragile shells. For the first three weeks of its life, the larva is a swimmer. It looks like a midgelet watermelon, seed with a shaggy wig at one end. The shaggy wig is a fringe of hairs which fan the little larvae through the water.

At the age of three weeks, the larva is ready to settle down. He sinks to the bottom, hoping to find a hard, clean surface. If he falls into mud or slime he is doomed. For he will suffocate unless he has a supply of clean water. Our baby oyster has a chance to survive if he lands on an old shell, a smooth rock or the posts of a pier. Oyster farmers cast shells on the sea floor to help the young oysters get started.

bits of seaweed and the beautiful one-celled plants called diatoms.

From here in our oyster has an easy life. Food and oxygen are served to him by the sea. True, he has some enemies, notably the starfish who can pry open his shells. But once settled, our little fellow has a good chance to live a contented, easy life.

At the age of one month, the young oyster is a quarter of an inch long. He grows fast, extending his house every year. In three or four years his shell house measures about four inches. Our oyster is ready for the market.

Andy sends a Hammond's International World Globe to Katherine Kernell, age nine, Mercer Island, Wash., for her question:

What is a watershed?

Every great river begins as a small stream or a group of small streams. It grows as it gathers other streams. As it flows along towards the sea, it is joined by countless streams and by large tributaries. Some of the tributaries are themselves sizeable rivers. They too have gathered the waters of countless streams and creeks. The waters come from hills, slopes and mountains far, far away from the mighty river. Some come down miles from one direction, some run down miles from the opposite direction. A picture of the big river, along with all its streams and tributaries, would cover a vast area of land.

This area of land is drained by the river, even though parts of it are far, far away from the river. Its rainfall and melting snows run into small streams and the small streams carry off the water and take it to the river. The whole area drained by the river may be called the watershed. All the water of the area is drained, or shed into the big river. The river carries along its teeming waters and finally pours them into the sea.

Man Found Guilty On Arson Charge

Emerson Eugene Michael, 4384 Roblinwood, was convicted in Saanich police court Thursday on a charge of arson arising from an attempt to burn his house last fall.

He was remanded for sentence to Jan. 25.

Magistrate H. C. Hall said he was satisfied the attempt came within terms of the Criminal Code, even though Michael was under the influence of alcohol at the time.

The house was damaged extensively, but firemen stated in evidence it was a "poor" fire.

Real-Life Trouble Faced by 'Kingfish'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Kingfish of the Amos 'n' Andy television show has been ordered held for trial on his wife's complaint of assault with a deadly weapon.

But just as Harry R. (Tom) Moore, 70, squeaks out of one scrape after another on the program, it appears that he'll avoid this real-life one, too. His wife Vivian, 39, has told the court she doesn't want to prosecute.

The couple sat together, arm in arm and smiling, at his preliminary court hearing Thursday.

Mrs. Moore had told police that during an argument in their home over a missing roast beef Jan. 7 he fired a pistol shot that landed in a china closet and hurt nobody.

Thursday she testified: The couple went out in mid-afternoon and dined on turkey. They returned about 10 p.m. to find her son, Paul V. Hubbard, 23, and her son-in-law and daughter, Earl and Eve Brown, watching television in the living room.

The Kingfish headed for the kitchen for a cut of beef. A moment later he charged into the living room yelling: "Where's the rest of that blankety-blank pot roast?"

Handwriting Expert Offers to Assist PTA In Guidance of 'Problem' School Children

Victoria handwriting expert Harry Hamlett has offered his services to the Parent-Teachers' Association of Greater Victoria.

He believes his long experience of grapho-analysis (analyzing characteristics of handwriting) would assist the PTA in the guidance of problem children.

"Grapho-analysis has been used very successfully among school children in France and in many parts of the United States," Mr. Hamlett said.

"In one school district in France the handwriting of some 600 children was analyzed and the personal problems revealed in this study enabled the education authorities to effect an improvement in 500 of these children."

Mr. Hamlett says he has given instruction to two Victoria detectives in the study of forgery by grapho-analysis.

"They showed me a cheque and I was able to prove that the figure on it had been raised from $5 to $50. My study showed that the figure $5 had been bleached out and the higher figure substituted in an almost identical ink."

A lean, good-humored enthusiast, Mr. Hamlett believes the study of grapho-analysis has been neglected in Canada both by police and educational authorities.

"The police of Indiana have to take an eight-week course in grapho-analysis following their regular training in crime detection," he said, "and the authorities have proved that it pays off."

"I cannot understand why so many organizations in Canada shut their eyes to this work."

Grapho-analysis is the study, not so much of handwriting as of handwriting characteristics. Thus, Mr. Hamlett finds that people with a strong forward stroke are usually good-natured extroverts while those with a pronounced backward slope tend to be moody introverts.

Many people write to him for an analysis of their writing and sometimes he examines letters from engaged couples.

"I can usually tell from their writing whether they will be compatible in marriage," he claims.

UBC Dean Heads Schools Inquiry

Financing Woes Excluded From New Investigation

Appointment of a three-man royal commission to make a "space age" inquiry into the B.C. educational system was announced today by Education Minister Peterson.

The investigation is concerned mainly with curriculum, rather than methods of financing education. It will look into the entire educational system up to the university level and is the first of its kind since 1925.

Chairman of the commission is Dean S. N. F. Chant of the University of B.C. The other members are John E. Liersch, executive vice-president of the Powell River Co. and a former head of the UBC department of forestry; and R. P. Walrod, general manager of B.C. Tree Fruit Ltd. and a member of the board of management of the B.C. Research Council.

Mr. Chant is dean of the faculty of arts and science at UBC and head of the department of philosophy and psychology.

LONG STUDY
In making the announcement, Mr. Peterson said the government expected a "searching inquiry" and indicated he expected the commission will take some time to complete its work and write a report.

"In the light of the grim international competition that lies ahead," the minister said, "it is desirable to have an examination made of our courses of studies, our aims, and our methods, by an independent and impartial commission with a view to the further strengthening of our school system."

Mr. Peterson said he believes B.C. has a good school system, but "no school system is so good that it cannot, and should not, be improved."

RESTRICTED
Terms of reference set out in an order-in-council approved by the cabinet today restrict the commission from inquiring into methods and distribution of school financing.

Otherwise the terms are very broad, the minister said, and allow a study of the "general economics" of the school system.

Mr. Peterson said he did not believe the same commission should look into both curriculum and financing.

However, teachers' salaries, scholarships and other general economic questions will be within the scope of the commission.

HEARINGS
It is expected that public hearings will be held around the province, and teachers' groups and school trustee boards will be asked to make submissions.

Among subjects the commission will examine, Mr. Peterson said, are these:
Length of the school day, term and high school program; discipline; utilization of school facilities; construction and operation of schools.

At the same time, Mr. Peterson announced that his department is going ahead with plans to introduce more mathematics and science into the general high school program beginning with the new term next fall.

There are those who express the view that the advent of Sputniks I and II demand a drastic revamping of our curriculum to place greater emphasis on science and mathematics, he said.

One of the main aims of the

WAS SMOKEY IN POKEY?

After a year's absence from his home at 1587 Wilmut Place, where he lived with Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Crawford, a three-year-old Persian tomcat came back Thursday.

There was no explanation for his absence, nor any reason known for his departure. The cat, Smokey by name, has been identified as one which had been visiting on Falkland Road for the past month.

But his whereabouts for the balance of his missing year are unknown.

He has resumed residence at Wilmut Place as if nothing had happened.

City Police Ask 21% Wage Boost

Victoria policemen's union today asked a 21% per cent wage increase, which would boost the salary of a first-class constable to about $436 a month.

The proposed new wage agreement was presented to the Victoria police commission by union president Constable Lorne Shandley and a delegation of officers.

In presenting the wage request, Constable Shandley pointed out Vancouver and West Vancouver police are now paid $397 monthly, compared to the present Victoria wage of $359.

Other proposals put forward by the union called for a retirement gratuity of one month's pay and a death benefit of six weeks' pay for officers' dependents if he dies while on the force.

FRINGE BENEFITS
Fringe benefits requested included issue by the department of service ribbons, as required by entitled war veterans on the force, and issuance of short-barrel pistols with spring holsters for detectives, to replace the heavy revolvers now issued.

The policemen also have asked three days' compassionate leave in event of a death in the immediate family, or five days when travel is required.

'FANTASTIC'
Oak Bay councillor Geoffrey Ellis, chairman of the council's negotiating committee, today termed "fantastic" wage demands of municipal firemen asking boosts ranging from 25.4 per cent to 52.9 per cent.

"They are asking the same wages as the Vancouver fire department," he said, "but the hazards are not to be compared. Oak Bay is a quiet residential district."

'FRIENDLY' TUSSLE COSTS PAIR $15

George Ducharm and Marvin Bittman, Victoria, each were fined $15 in city police court today for causing a public disturbance in the 500 block Fisgard Thursday.

The men said they had been "just playing around" in a friendly wrestling match.

Raw Material Given Handicapped Project

Mayor Percy Scurrell will open Goodwill Enterprises' newly-renovated workshops for handicapped men and women at 560 Yates on Saturday at 3 p.m.

The public is invited to view the premises between 2 and 5:30 p.m. and tea will be served by 22 wives of Victoria Rotarians.

The Rotary Club has spent nearly $13,000 on renovating and rebuilding the 100-year-old premises and is now raising funds through its "beautiful baby" contest for building and equipment.

All wishing to compete for the $1,500 cash prizes offered in the contest are invited to get entry forms from Rotarians or Wharf Street.

RAW MATERIAL
Following an appeal for public support by Rotary president Dr. R. J. Wilde, considerable raw material for Goodwill's workshops was delivered at 560 Yates Street today.

"We are very grateful for this speedy response," said Mrs. J. Evelyn Lamont, executive director.

"What we need most are discarded clothing, boots and shoes and household goods suit."

ASK The TIMES
Q—Could you tell me what other provinces besides B.C. make it compulsory for those over 70 to undergo a medical examination at their own expense to hold driving licences? And must tourists obtain a driving permit?—W.J.C.

A—The provinces are not uniform in driving tests for those over 70. They vary, as does payment for medical check-ups for driving. It is not compulsory for a tourist entering B.C. to obtain a driver's permit. He can operate in B.C. for six months on his permit originating in his place of residence.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums.

MONTE ROBERTS

Hardly front page news, but...

Owner of B.C. auto licence plate 100 is, appropriately enough, Lawrie Wallace, chairman of the B.C. Centennial committee... too bad he doesn't drive a truck, so he could have C-100... personally, I'd like licence plate 1,000-100 doesn't seem nearly old enough for me... but all this is academic... who can see the plates well enough to read the numbers?... and I'm told Lawrie has taken down his Christmas decorations at last... but his white house on Fairfield Road still looks bright and gay, what with Century Sam on the lawn and a king-size Centennial flag waving bravely overhead...

Street seen: Two gentlemen so deeply engrossed in conversation they stepped off the curb at View to cross Douglas as the light changed... crossed to mid-street against the amber, completed the crossing strolling and talking, obviously unaware they were against the red light... traffic waited patiently with nary a horn toot... for the gentlemen in question were police officers... no, I don't know their names, and if I did, you think I'd publish them?... hah!...

Lester B. Pearson certainly had his Victory speech well prepared for the TV broadcast... wonder if Paul Martin put in as much time preparing HIS... just in case he won?... slogan for political pundits, for once, can be: Never were so many so right... but I don't think they'll be able to say the same on their forecasts for a spring election... (remember this if I'm right, forget it if I'm wrong)...

Nomination for the opening sentence in a press release to end all opening sentences in press releases: "A tremendous event, involving the most fantastic magnitude of construction machinery ever placed on the market at one time... Come, come, now. No understatements, please."

A federal explosives inspector has ordered an immediate stop to the building and firing of rockets in B.C., and no doubt the order will be enforced.

Wonder if he couldn't arrange a similar order for Russia—at least until the Western world catches up.

Final sad thought in regard to Mike Pearson: The Liberals have gained a leader, but the Times has lost a columnist.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

A bubble gum machine outside Frankie's Confectionery, 403 Craigflower, was stolen Thursday night, it was reported to city police today.

A meeting of the League of the Handicapped will be held in the recreation room of the YWCA tonight at 7:30.

Transportation may be obtained by phoning 4-1587 or 4-6960.

One year's suspended sentence on a $500 good behavior bond was given Robert Lewis Radcliffe, Mount Newton Cross Road, in Central Saanich police court Thursday for common assault. He was charged with assaulting George Outhwaite, also of Mount Newton Cross Road, on Jan. 3.

Iron Ore Operation Shuts Down

Weather is forcing the immediate closure of the Empire Development Co. Ltd. iron ore operation at Port McNeill, where 120 men will be thrown out of work, but the provincial iron ore tax will govern its reopening.

It was planned to start operating in April, company president James A. Scott announced today in Vancouver, but directors plan a reappraisal of unforeseen production costs, particularly of the tax, which was imposed just as the plant came into production.

"Although iron ore production has been carried on for years in B.C. by American and other interests," Mr. Scott said, "our company, the most recent large-scale producer, is entirely Canadian controlled but the new tax."

He said firm contracts were entered into before development of the iron ore deposits, and that all were financed on the basis of known and ascertainable costs and taxes at the time.

Stanley R. Stewart, 911 Caledonia, was sentenced in city police court today to 21 days in jail to be served concurrently, on each of three charges of careless driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving while his licence was under suspension. In passing sentence, Magistrate H. C. Hall noted the accused had been fined for careless driving and failing to remain "less than two months ago." At that time his licence was suspended.

Robert Francis McIsaac, 238 Douglas, was fined $50 in city police court Thursday for having liquor in a restaurant illegally.

Veteran of 17 years in the RCAF, James Ashworth, 38, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ashworth, 2455 Beach, has been promoted to squadron leader. He has served as a fighter pilot in India and Burma, as commanding officer at Tofino, and since 1957 as a member of the Alouette Fighter Squadron.

William James Falconer, 944 Darwin, was fined $25 and Henry Eng, 3475 Quadra, was fined $20 in Saanich police court Thursday for failing to obey an order of the fire marshal.

Mahinder Singh, 583 Dupplin, proprietor of Hilcrest Fuel, was fined $35 in Saanich police court Thursday for operating a business without a trades licence.

John H. Creed, 18, of R.R. 1, Brentwood Bay, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at 11:30 a.m. today with a broken thumb and lacerations to the left knee suffered in a traffic accident at the corner of Herald and Douglas.

Creed had been riding a motorcycle north on Douglas when he was in collision with a truck being driven east on Herald by Dyer Munn, 1157 Burdett.

Victoria council fire wardens committee was to meet later today for study of three proposed sites for the new main fire hall. The problem of where to locate the new $300,000 hall was tossed into the air again Thursday when a meeting of council could not agree on a site proposed by the committee.

EVERYBODY WANTS TO GO ABOARD SATURDAY

Leilani Passes Snapped Up

The decks have been cleared at Ogden Point dock for the 8 p.m. Saturday arrival of Ss. Leilani, Hawaiian cruise ship which will embark about 100 passengers here.

Inside the big freight shed only a few piles of plywood and one small bundle of freight is on hand, leaving plenty of room to handle baggage, sightseeing buses, and cars of dignitaries who will be on hand to welcome the ship on her first voyage here.

"Century Sam," symbolic figure in B.C.'s centennial celebrations, will distribute bags of gold among passengers aboard the holiday cruise ship Leilani when she docks at Ogden Point Saturday night.

It should be added that the bags contain chocolate coins wrapped in gold foil. But the intent is shown on the tag, which says:

"Here's a bag of gold from Century Sam in Victoria, 1958."

But the general public will not be allowed beyond barriers at the entrance to the freight shed, unless in possession of boarding passes.

And today, boarding passes, like Grey Cup tickets and hens teeth, are non-existent.

Each of the passengers boarding here has been allowed a limited number of tickets for friends and relatives who wish to see them off.

Other boarding tickets have been issued to Chamber of Commerce officials and others.

1,000 VISITORS

The ship's owners expect close to 1,000 visitors to clamor aboard while the Leilani is in port, from 8 p.m. to sailing time at 11:59 p.m.

S. C. Arvison, dock agent, anticipates no trouble in handling the 18,000-ton, 622-foot ship. The regular lines crew will be supplemented by on-duty longshoremen, if necessary.

Tugs for docking will be supplied by Island Tug and Barge Ltd.

Official welcoming party for the ship will be headed by Mayor Percy B. Scurrell. He will be greeted aboard by the shipmaster, Commodore Sven M. A. Rogenes, and taken on a tour of the ship.

KOA BOWL

At a ceremony in the master's suite, the commodore, on behalf of Hon. William F. Quinn, governor of Territorial Hawaii, will present a Koa Bowl to Hon. William N. Chant, who will accept it as a gesture of friendship to the premier of B.C.

The mayor will be presented with a key to the city of Honolulu, on behalf of Mayor Neal S. Balisdel.

The Chamber of Commerce has arranged a gala welcome for the ship, which carries 650 passengers. All accommodation has been sold out for this cruise.

Public Panel On Amalgamation

A public panel on the much-debated question of amalgamation for Greater Victoria will be held in Victoria High School auditorium Feb. 25 at 8 p.m. Eric Mallett, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce public affairs group, announced today.

Taking part will be Eric Hardy, Toronto, executive director of the Citizen's Research Institute of Canada; Forrest L. Shaw as moderator; Reeves A. C. Wurtele, Arthur Ash and Fred Norris.

Mayor Percy Scurrell has also been invited to participate and questions will be invited from the audience.

PUBLISHER'S NOTEBOOK

The Great Hockey Hassle

There are a couple of aspects of the current ice hockey dustup which I find decidedly distasteful.

No matter how one feels about Colin Kilburn, it seemed to me pretty poor pool when a vocal section of the crowd Wednesday evening began to boo Pat Egan, who played a whale of a game and is an innocent bystander to the whole ge-fuffle.

"Secondly, I have nothing but contempt for the yahoos who vilified Dr. Andy Reid, president of the Cougars, and his wife, as they sat watching the game the other night.

Anyone who knows Andy Reid knows that he is a sincere, honorable sportsman whose only interest is in giving Victoria a contending hockey club.

In private life he is a skilled surgeon, with a host of devoted patients. He took on the presidency of the Cougars at a crucial stage in their career and worked as hard as anyone to keep the game alive in this area. In this he has been helped by his wife, who wears a Booster Club button and is as loyal a fan as Ireland ever produced.

Reid devotes a lot of time to hockey without a cent of pay. Anything he does, he does from honest conviction.

What has happened here is what the diplomats call "a breakdown in communication." As long as a month ago, Dr. Reid found he could not get the answers out of Colin. With the club sinking further behind every game, the president began to wonder if the Cougars had passed the point of rebuilding, and determined to find out why.

He called Colin into an office, closed the door, and indulged in some plain talk. It wasn't too satisfactory an air-clearing. And that was the beginning of the end.

The end came when Colin "went through the roof" on Sunday. His bitter remarks left no elbow room, no door open for a reconciliation. Directors who liked the manager, and wanted to be generous in their treatment of him, ended up with different views.

If fans disagree with the directors' decision, they must accept the fact that the club should be run by a player whose won-loss record is the worst in our history, and whose judgment of hockey talent has been demonstrably weak.

A case in point is Don Chiupka. Kilburn always insisted that the Prairie boy was unworthy of Cougar livery, and last year kept him on the bench most of the season. This year Chiupka has scored 11 goals against us, including a cruncher Wednesday night.

The fans may disagree. But they are a mile off base when they abuse Dr. Reid, a decent fellow who is trying to do what he thinks is right.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Imported Rarities Make Eating Very Interesting!

By PENNY SAVER

Browsing in a local grocery store this morning, I found myself poking and prying around the novelty palatables with an intense interest! I found little tins of such rarities as colored coffee sugar and instant Yorkshire pudding. Both are imported from England. The colored coffee sugar can be used also as topping for desserts and cakes and it comes at 45 cents a package.

Instant Yorkshire pudding is rather unusual as it is not only a batter for pudding, but it can be used for pancakes, too! A package of this mix is 19 cents.

Also on the shelf here I found 25 cents packages of imported German pumpernickel. As you probably know, pumpernickel is a bread of coarse, unbolted rye. Spread with butter it's extremely tasty!

Now, here is something different! If roasted quail appeals to you (it doesn't to me, but I'm soft-hearted) you'll be interested in the cans of smoked quail in town now. Though it's an hors d'oeuvre, my readers who are willing to try anything once, might like the idea! Expensive though it is, it is delicious, I'm told. It comes at $1.10 a tin.

Getting down to the business of economizing for the week-end, I find that one of the most inexpensive meats to consume (especially in a large family) is veal. There are veal patties at 37 cents a pound. This with acorn squash at 12 cents pound, makes an economical and quick Saturday evening dinner.

It's a well known fact that when the shopper buys certain foods in bulk, pennies are saved. This is true too of gallon tins of fruit cocktail. For $1.59 a gallon tin, the wise shopper can really stock up on this delicious fruit mix for desserts and cocktails... a winter treat for hard-to-plan meals!

If this next item isn't penny-less, I don't know what is! For 99 cents the smart shopper can buy a pound and a half of high quality bacon. It's fresh stock, too.

The British have got something with their morning tea breaks, and their ever popular high tea! A fine brand of tea (that is English tea) has lots to do with it. It has wonderful flavor and an amazing pick-me-up quality! It's 98 cents a pound where I shop and it's imported from England!

Where? Don't be shy. Phone me at 2-3131.

RESPONSIBILITIES FOR BRIDEGROOM'S MOTHER

What part does the mother of the groom play at his wedding? If the wedding rehearsal is after dinner, would ice cream and cake be sufficient to serve later? If there is to be a party before the late rehearsal, what would be appropriate to serve?

LOUISE DAVIS ANSWERS:

The bridegroom's mother is a top priority guest at the wedding and at the reception. At the service, she sits in the front in the section to the right of the centre aisle. At the reception, she stands beside the bride's parents. She has no other responsibilities. She does not contribute to any of the wedding or reception expenses. I should think that ice cream and cake would be enough to serve at an after-rehearsal party, assuming that members of the bridal party will have previously had some kind of a substantial meal. These affairs usually break up early so that the young people can have a good night's sleep, and serving anything elaborate, such as a late buffet supper, is apt to delay them. If there is to be a party before a late rehearsal, a dinner is in order, but planned early enough so that the bridal party will be punctual for the rehearsal.

Take a Chance—Toastmistress Dinner Theme

Miss Elisabeth Baess was table topic mistress at last meeting of Victoria Toastmistress Club held in Monterey Restaurant. She introduced Mrs. B. R. Grant, Mrs. J. A. de Bourcier and Mrs. E. Gordon, all of whom spoke on the evening's theme "Take a Chance."

Toastmistress was Miss Barbara Helm, Miss M. Nyland, a new member, gave her beginner's speech. Others on the program were Mrs. W. McAllister, Miss Maide Cottingham, Mrs. I. Warren, Miss Helen Egan, Mrs. T. Ward, Miss Grace Mitchell, Mrs. G. McKay, Mrs. Robert MacMillan and Mrs. A. Rose.

Vote of thanks was given by Miss Audrey Harness. Critics were Mrs. B. Grant and Mrs. L. Prevost and the evaluator, Mrs. V. Carter.

Miss Heim won the "Oscar" for best speech of the evening, and Mrs. McAllister, the "spur" for showing the greatest improvement.

TEMPLE CHIEF AND HER OFFICERS

Mrs. Anne Carlson, second from right, seated, was installed head of Island Temple No. 8, Pythian Sisters, last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Carlson's officers for the year are, seated from the left, Mrs. Ruby McGowan, Mrs. Adella Banks, Mrs. Vera Berry, and standing, Miss Vera Mesher, P.C.; Mrs. Hilda Johnson, Mrs. Mary Nordby, Mrs. Minnie Unwin and Mrs. Constance Mullen, P.C. Installing officer was Mrs. H. Banks, assisted by Mrs. V. Flint, and Mrs. N. Ryan. Pianist was Mrs. V. Bayly. The retiring chief, Mrs. Banks, was presented with a gift from the Temple.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Fat Knees Are Cute—Don't Be Too Quick to Reduce

(The Friday Question Box)

Q.—"What can I do to get rid of fat knees. I am not overweight but my knees are fat."

A.—Don't be too quick to try to banish them. Most folks think that dimples are prettier than knees. As a matter of fact, it is most difficult to reduce the knees. Vigorous massage or kneading the fat on the knees between the fingers and heels of the hands may be helpful. Also, try this exercise. Stand facing the wall with your hands on the wall for support. Bend the right knee as far back as possible. Return foot to floor. Bend the left knee as far back as possible. Return left foot to the floor. Continue, alternating right and left.

Q.—"I am 15½ years old, 5 feet 2½ inches tall and weigh 99 pounds. Should I lose or gain?"

A.—You are a lot underweight and should gain.

Q.—"I am 5 feet 8½ inches tall and weigh 151 pounds. My bust measures 35, waist 27 and hips 40 inches. Please tell me what is wrong with my measurements and how I can improve them."

A.—You are not much overweight for your height. I would guess that you should lose about five pounds. Take hip and waist slimming exercises while watching your diet a bit. Your hips are most out of proportion.

Q.—"Please tell me what is wrong with my friend's measurements. She is small boned. Height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 108 pounds; bust, 32 inches; waist, 24 inches."

A.—Your friend is about 15 pounds underweight. Her measurements are in good ratio. She should gain all over.

Q.—"Can you tell me how late in the fall one can wear patent leather slippers? Can you wear them through the winter?"

A.—Patent leather shoes usually are thought of as shoes for spring. In other words, they usually are worn with lightweight clothes through the spring, summer and very early fall.

Q.—"I have such large hands that I am self-conscious. I try not to be but just can't help it. What could I do to make them look smaller?"

A.—You are certain to make them more noticeable if you are self-conscious about them because in trying to hide them you will assume awkward positions. Do forget them except to see that they are well groomed. It also would be best to avoid bright nail polish.

TODAY'S RECIPE

COTTAGE PUDDING, FRUIT SAUCE

Pudding: 1/2 cup shortening, 1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sauce: 2 cups canned fruit cocktail, 1 cup syrup from fruit cocktail, 1/2 cup water, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/2 cup sugar, few grains salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Pudding: Soften shortening in mixing bowl. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add to shortening with unbeaten egg, milk and vanilla. Beat for two minutes. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) 30 to 35 minutes. Cut into squares and serve warm with fruit cocktail sauce.

Sauce: Drain fruit cocktail.

Heat syrup and water. Add cornstarch, sugar and salt blended together and cook and stir until clear and thickened. Add fruit cocktail and cook 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and blend in lemon juice and rind. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Native Daughters Receive Chief

On Thursday evening 25 members of the Native Daughters of British Columbia, Post No. 3, entertained Mrs. R. Whisker, grand factor of the Grand Lodge of Native Daughters of B.C., and Mrs. C. Jones, grand secretary, at a dinner in the private dining room at Strathcona Hotel. Both grand officers, on their official visit to the Post, are from Ladysmith. They were presented with corsages of yellow and white flowers. Following dinner a meeting was held in the Orange Hall committee; Mrs. Brown told of the annual meeting of the B.C. Historical Society. During the evening three new members were initiated, Mrs. Whisker addressed the members and later Mrs. Fouracre presented both Mrs. Whisker and Mrs. Jones with cake plates and Mrs. Lyle Wicks. They were welcomed by Mrs. Fouracre and presented with yellow and white corsages. Mrs. Ida Brown told the gathering of arrangements made for a centennial tea in old Craigflower School in July; Mrs. A. Kinsman reported for the sick committee; Mrs. Brown told of the annual meeting of the B.C. Historical Society. No Move to Opposition Residence 'Silly to Move Twice'—Mrs. Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Mrs. Maryon Pearson wore "an old hat I found in the cupboard" to the national Liberal convention that chose her husband as its new leader Thursday night.

Lester B. Pearson, former external affairs minister and 1957 Nobel Peace Prize winner, won the post in an overwhelming victory over two candidates.

The white hat his wife wore with a blue, scoop-neck silk dress was of ostrich tips.

"I don't think I really doubted my husband's winning," said tall, black-haired Mrs. Pearson, a native of Winnipeg. Then, anticipating reporters' questions, she added:

"How do I feel? I feel fine."

MOVE ONLY ONCE

Asked whether she would move into Stornoway, official residence of the Commons Opposition leader and now unoccupied, she quickly replied:

"Certainly not—it would be awfully silly to move twice." It was more important that she get her husband off on a holiday before March 1, she said.

The Pearsons now live in an Ottawa apartment.

Her husband, at a post-victory press conference, expressed similar feelings about Stornoway and "moving twice."

Mrs. Pearson moved to the front of the platform, beside her husband, only when delegates' shouts insisted after Mr. Pearson had delivered his speech of acceptance. She did not speak.

"Wives of Liberal leaders don't make speeches, a tradition which I wholeheartedly endorse," she said.

She sat beside her daughter, Patricia, Mrs. Walter Hanna of Toronto, on the platform. A son, Geoffrey, is with the external affairs department.

MARRIED HER TEACHER

A former University of Toronto arts student who married her history professor, Mrs. Pearson said it never occurred to her that she would become a party leader's wife.

But both the leadership convention and the presentation of the Nobel Prize in Oslo, Norway, last month had been exciting.

She said she would travel with her husband during election campaigns "until my strength gives out."

One of the first indications of her new role was a request for her autograph.

"Nobody ever asked me, for an autograph before," she said, chuckling as she scribbled her name.

Cordova Bay Guild Raises $1,535

Financial report read by Mrs. N. Westwood at annual meeting of the Women's Guild of St. David's By-The-Sea, showed $1,535 raised during the year. Main money-making events listed by secretary Mrs. T. Brown were two bazaars, a rummage sale, a tea and sale, flower show and harvest supper.

The president, Mrs. K. M. Lewis gave a report that included a note that members of the guild did a quantity of sewing for the nurses division of the Provincial Department of Health, during the year. Mrs. A. Taylor gave a report on sick and sympathy; Mrs. S. W. Tucker, on behalf of the church, thanked guild members for their year's work.

Plans were made for the annual rummage sale on Feb. 1 at 9.30 a.m. in the guild room. Announcement was made that contributions of furniture, appliances, wearable clothing and books will be accepted for this event.

Rev. R. J. Walsh presided at the election in which the following were named: Mrs. Lewis re-elected president; Mrs. J. Mitchell, vice-president; Mrs. Brown and Mrs. M. Ronald, re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Tea was served by Mrs. J. B. Minchin, Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. V. Field.

St. Louis College Mothers' Club, coffee party and bake sale, including home-made bread, Douglas Room, Hudson's Bay, Saturday from 10.45 a.m. to 1.30 p.m. Centennial dollars door prize. Proceeds in aid of college. Tickets from members or at door.

YMCA Auxiliary's Growth Means New Assistants

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the YMCA has grown to such an extent during the past year, that it was decided at the annual meeting to appoint assistants to committee chairmen.

Committee chairmen and their assistants are Mrs. R. B. Wilson, house committee; Mrs. G. Carruthers, Mrs. H. Botterell; Mrs. G. Wheaton, ways and means; Mrs. H. Hawkins, Mrs. W. Davidson, Mrs. G. F. Dunn, Mrs. G. Gregory; Mrs. J. Horne, membership; Mrs. W. Little; Mrs. C. Savage, telephone; Mrs. M. Hedley, Mrs. J. Heaman, Mrs. C. Decker, Mrs. G. Duncan, Mrs. H. Fielder; Mrs. F. Appleton, invitations; Mrs. L. Mayhew, press; Mrs. F. Waring; Mrs. E. Warburton, name plates; Mrs. L. McNeil; Mrs. W. Walker, labels; Mrs. T. McMaster; Mrs. J. Barry, social; Mrs. J. Muirhead, Mrs. H. Johnston, Mrs. R. Parfitt; Mrs. B. Nickells, dishcloths.

Assistants to corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. Clark are Mrs. F. Fairley and Mrs. C. Annett.

Chief money-making projects of the year were a rummage sale, coffee party, auction sale, home-cooking sale, fashion show and sales of address labels and dishcloths. A total of over $1,250 was realized from these events.

Model Meeting for Service Groups

Trying a new angle in public relations, Victoria and Arbutus Toastmistress Clubs combined to entertain representatives from outstanding civic groups and community service organizations at a dessert meeting in the Monterey Restaurant, Thursday.

Theme of the evening being "Community Service," the hostess clubs staged a model meeting, showing how Toastmistress and Toastmaster groups can help active members of other organizations, giving them poise through command of speech.

Victoria club public relations chairman, Mrs. C. C. Warren, explained that Toastmistress groups teach correct parliamentary procedure, good posture while speaking, word power, projection, voice inflection and how to plan a speech to a certain length.

Guests included Mrs. Percy B. Scurrah representing her husband, Mayor Scurrah; Mrs. J. L. Andrews, Mrs. E. Mills, Canadian Association of Consumers; Dr. Henrietta Anderson, Mrs. William Ellis, Greater Victoria Musical Festival; Mrs. Fred Sharples, Women's Institutes; Capt. D. J. Proudfoot, G. K. Sammon, Greater Victoria Centennial Committee; Miss Elizabeth Riddell, Miss Betty Short, Victorian Order of Nurses; Mrs. R. R. Wilde, Mrs. I. Ireland, Family and Children's Service; H. P. Mickelson, Canadian Mental Health Association; Mrs. V. Thistle, Canadian Red Cross and Mrs. Gwen Carrier, Solarium Junior League.

Toastmasters present were Dr. W. W. McLuhan, district educational chairman; Jim McEvay, area governor; Bob Laird, Les Vanderbyl, Frank Dearman, district secretary-treasurer, and Clare Yarwood.

Miss Muriel McKeown was chairman of the meeting and Mrs. H. P. Mickelson acted as toastmistress. Table topic was conducted by Miss Joyce Taylor, inspiration was given by Mrs. J. Peterson and timer was Mrs. H. Ker.

Mrs. J. R. Pipes, Arbutus Club public relations chairman, spoke on "Toastmistress and Your Community."

Other toastmistress speeches were given by Mrs. C. S. Yarwood, "Women's Institutes"; Mrs. P. Rayment, "Musical Festival"; Mrs. M. Darling, "Red Cross"; Mrs. L. A. Gordon, "Canadian Association of Consumers"; Mrs. J. A. DeBourcier, "Family and Children's Service"; Mrs. E. G. Aldred, "Centennial Committee."

Miss G. Mitchell gave the vote of thanks; Miss F. Scoville, evaluator; Mrs. R. Rose and Miss E. Brett, critics.

$33,106 Damages Against Vessel

(From CP Dispatches)

VANCOUVER—The owners of an Italian steamship were assessed damages totalling $33,106 Thursday after the ship was held liable for the sinking of a towboat and the loss of three of its crew.

The Giovanni Amendola was held liable by Mr. Justice Sidney Smith for the loss of the Powell River Company's tug Teeshoe, holed by the freighter's propeller Dec. 4, 1954, as she was drawing away after putting a pilot aboard.

An appeal from the judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada was dismissed. Damages were assessed by registrar Leo Mendez of the Admiralty Court.

The trial judge found the accident was caused by the negligence of those on board the freighter operating the propeller before the Teeshoe cleared her side.

The damages were assessed at $25,000 for the loss of the tug and $8,106 for the cost of chartering a replacement vessel.

VICTIM IDENTIFIED

LITTLE FORT — A construction worker killed here Tuesday when struck in the head by a valve from a grease jack has been identified as Frederick Albert Frye, 39.

Born at Alameda, B.C., he spent all of his life in this district. His wife, Dora, two sons and three daughters survive.

LAYOFFS AT KITIMAT

KITIMAT — The Aluminum Company of Canada said Thursday it will lay off about 60 men during the next three weeks and reduce production capacity of its huge smelting plant here.

Works manager Gerry Gwyn said Potline No. 5 will be taken out of regular production, half the line being used for experimental purposes and the other half being left idle. The remaining four potlines will operate normally.

BOY SURVIVES FALL

VANCOUVER — A schoolboy hurtled more than two blocks down an open drainage flume Thursday afternoon, then fell 25 feet to a boulder-strewn beach.

In fairly good condition in North Vancouver General Hospital is Ernie Thompson, 9, of suburban Deep Cove. He suffered two fractured hips.

He lay on the beach for five hours before he was discovered. David's father, Les Hunter, said the boy had crawled 100 feet from the bottom of the flume down the beach.

CANNERY MOVED

MISSION CITY — Canadian Cannery (Western) Ltd., established here in 1926, has announced transfer of its canning operation to Vancouver.

Consolidation of operations is the reason given by C. Stuart Thompson, company supervisor, for the move.

JUDGE SERVES WARNING

VANCOUVER — Magistrate Oscar Orr served notice on Thursday that sentences for robbery are going to be heavier.

"The public is entitled to some consideration in these matters, but the question is whether they have been getting enough," he said, after finding Hugh E. Cockrell, 26, guilty of robbing a candy store here Dec. 9.

"Sentences have been heavy and they are going to be heavier," he said, remanding Cockrell to Jan. 24 for sentence.

TOOLS STOLEN

VANCOUVER — Theft of tools valued at $2,300 from the University of B.C. new arts building now under construction is being investigated by city police and RCMP.

THIRD PENGUIN DIES

VANCOUVER — Lung fungus disease claimed its third penguin victim at Stanley Park zoo here Thursday.

The only remaining emperor died during the afternoon after losing its battle against aspergillosis despite injections of a new type drug sent from Portland, Ore.

Vancouver zoo received the emperor and two adult penguins following a Portland zoo expedition to the Antarctic.

KNIFE THROWER FINED

KITIMAT (CP) — An Italian construction worker who had an obsession that a fellow-worker had killed his mother was fined $500 Thursday for throwing a knife at the man.

County Judge W. O. Fulton said he was satisfied that Salvatore Bruzzese, 25, was under the influence of liquor and in such a mental state that he couldn't think properly when he threw a hunting knife at Nick Slotnik in a bunkhouse Dec. 10.

CITY COUNCIL BRIEFS

Police Forces Merger Proposed

Amalgamation of Saanich and Victoria police forces should be undertaken as a prime project by the new intermunicipal committee, Ald. Elmer D. McEwen said Thursday.

He said a big saving in public funds would result. Mayor Percy Scurrah replied: "That is just one of the many questions which I hope will be discussed during the year."

Council authorized Memorial Arena Commission to call tenders for supply of plastic pipe which could be used in laying a new floor freezing system.

Ald. Austin I. Curtis said the motion doesn't give instructions to buy a new system, but gives the commission the right to make enquiries regarding prices and adaptability.

would have first chance to buy the land if it is released by the department of national defence, at a price of $27,900. The option is good until 1975.

Council increased salaries for department heads at city hall 5.2 per cent, to balance a similar increase given earlier to the inside staff.

A 49-step scale of payment to department heads and professional staff now extends between $394 and $834 monthly. City manager C. C. Wyatt was authorized to grade officials according to the scale.

Council supported Mayor Scurrah's earlier suggestion that the city option on Gordon Head army camp property be surrendered to Victoria College. The option stipulated the city

Mayor and aldermen agreed to accept an invitation from Archbishop Sexton to attend a special service for the B.C. centenary, Sunday, April 27 at Christ Church Cathedral.

3,000 Left Homeless

PANAMA CITY (Reuters) — An estimated 3,000 persons were left homeless after fire Thursday destroyed 14 tenement buildings in the heart of Panama City. About 50 persons were taken to hospital. The fire swept through three blocks of wooden buildings.

Cadillac

It Says "Greatness"...in Any Language!

Wherever highways exist and motor cars are known, the name "Cadillac" signifies but one thing—the unmistakable leader in its field.

For the motor car that has borne that distinguished name for the past fifty-five years has been so well designed and so soundly crafted that it has become a universal synonym for everything good and fine and desirable in a manufactured product.

And never have these virtues been more evident than they are in the '58 Cadillac.

A single, sweeping glance at the new "car of cars," for example, reveals a grace and majesty never before attainable.

A brief journey at the wheel provides irrefutable proof of the magnificent strides forward that have been made in Cadillac performance and in Fleetwood coachcrafting.

And a study of the facts about Cadillac economy and dependability indicates a soundness of investment beyond anything in Cadillac's brilliant past.

Have you as yet inspected and driven a 1958 Cadillac? If you haven't, then arrange to do so today.

Whatever your favorite among Cadillac's wide selection of models, which includes the distinguished Eldorado Brougham, you will find it a rare masterpiece in everything a Cadillac can be.

And we know you will agree that the Cadillac car now says "greatness" more eloquently than at any previous moment in Cadillac history!

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto Eases Off In Quiet Trading

Prices on the Toronto stock market were easier today in quiet trading. Industrials were easier, led by refining oils and utilities. Steels had a majority of gains.

The market at New York remained generally lower in sluggish dealings today, although there was a flutter of movement which brought some small gains.

Losses of about a point were shown by International Nickel.

AT TORONTO Senior base metals, uranium, golds and coppers all lost ground. Most individual losses were narrow.

Western oils had three declines for each gain. Most losses were less than 15 cents.

AT NEW YORK Canadian losers, besides Nickel, included Aluminum Ltd., Hudson Bay Mining, Canadian Pacific, Granby Mining, Dome Mines and Distillers-Seagrams. McIntyre Porcupine gained %.

On the American Stock Exchange, both Brazilian and Canadian Marconi were unchanged. Small gains were shown by Scurry-Rainbow, Sapphire Petroleum, and Molybdenite. Preston East Dome, Fargo Oil and Richfield were slightly lower.

AT MONTREAL prices were still lower today on the stock exchange. Trading was light in the industrials but heavy in the mines and oils.

AT LONDON Wall Street's disappointing close Thursday after such a promising start, the recent better trend in the stock market was halted today.

In some cases where prices had been hoisted in anticipation of Wall Street maintaining its advance there was a sharp reversal. This was particularly noticeable in dollar securities and oil shares. Dollar-edged securities, however, made steady progress and recorded widespread improvements. The feature of foreigners was the further sharp rise in German municipal bonds. Industrials generally were irregular.

AT VANCOUVER there was little trading except in low price mining stock. Price changes were slight. Giant Mascot moved 10.00 at 11. Sunshine Lardeau traded 12.50 at 10. Quatsino sold 1.00 at 2.00.

Ford Pulls Back, Curb on Edsel

DETROIT (UP)—Ford Motor Co. which launched the new Edsel cars with a big splash last fall into a fast-evaporating medium-priced car market, this week pulled back and made the Edsel division a part of its Lincoln-Mercury division.

The company also gave new emphasis to the growing market for foreign-built small cars by turning over the marketing job for its English Ford line to the new, consolidated division.

Boeing Gets Contract To Build Missiles

SEATTLE (AP)—Boeing Airplane Co. said recently it has received a contract from the United States Air Force for construction of about 100 Borealis missile interceptors.

The contract also calls for ground equipment needed in supporting Borealis missiles at two tactical Borealis bases.

The 47-foot, 15,000-pound missiles have a range of 200 to 300 miles and are reported to have reached speeds of nearly 2,000 miles an hour.

ON REPLY TO SOVIETS

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor Party today assailed Prime Minister Macmillan for failing to say "yes or no" in his reply to Premier Nikolai Bulganin's Soviet letter of Dec. 11.

Macmillan's reply, published Thursday night, gave no commitment on a Soviet-proposed summit conference within three months.

Hugh Gaitskell, Labor Party leader, said Macmillan has missed "a great opportunity to give the world the lead for which it has been waiting."

HUTCHISON FROM OTTAWA

'New Kind
Of Leader
For New Age'

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor of The Times

CONVENTION HALL, Ottawa—Across a shouting crowd of 5,000, the man on the platform faced the portraits of three other men 10 times life-size.

But the new leader of the Liberal Party bore no resemblance outwardly or inwardly to the white-plumed Laurier, the ponderous King or the sharp-featured St. Laurent whose heir he had just become.

Lester Pearson stood there in life-size as the living portrait of a new age.

His predecessors were all Victorians and children of the nineteenth century.

He belonged to the twentieth.

He differed not only in look but in experience, mind and temperament from any man who ever led the Liberal party before him.

Yet, like all of them, he seemed oddly alone in the sudden loneliness of leadership though the eyes of the whole nation were upon him.

There was the true meaning of Thursday night's climactic spectacle as Canadian Liberals placed their future and their hopes in Pearson's hands—a new kind of man would lead from now on in a new way. And he began to lead from that moment.

The hoarse cheers had hardly died down before he turned his formal acceptance address into a fierce opening assault upon the Diefenbaker government which he may defeat in Parliament next week.

For the first time the nation beheld in place of the suave international diplomat a fighting politician and perhaps a future prime minister delivering the greatest speech of his life.

Laurier's dual elegance, King's tortured paragraphs and St. Laurent's grand-terric spectacle as Canadian

Sommers Case
Until Feb. 12

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charges of conspiracy and bribery against former Forests Minister Robert Sommers and four lumber companies were adjourned today until Feb. 12 after all but one of the defence lawyers agreed to proceed with evidence then "all day, every day" until the case ends.

After a series of adjournments dating back some two months, when the first bribery charges were laid, Magistrate Oscar Orr ordered the police court trial bound over to that day.

The lone defence hold-out, Sommers' counsel Nicholas Mussallam, said the former British Columbia cabinet minister "feels very strongly that he has a public duty" to attend the forthcoming B.C. legislature session.

The start, Mr. Mussallam said, starts Jan. 23 and is not likely to end until the end of March. Mr. Sommers sits as a Social Credit member for Rossland-Trail.

Mr. Mussallam said he will consult with Sommers and advise the court whether his client would agree with Magistrate Orr's suggestion that "This is probably as important as sitting in the legislature."

Agreement on a date was reached in a pre-session huddle among prosecutor Stewart McMorran and lawyers representing all those charged—Sommers, C. D. Schultz, H. Wilson Gray, John M. Gray, B.C. Forest Products Limited, C. D. Schultz Limited, Pacific Coast Services Limited and Evergreen Lumber Sales Limited.

Also listed in two of the charges is Hector Munro, late president of B.C. Forest Products who died last December.

Pearson Cheered
By Friends, Foes

(From Times' Wire Services)

Newly-elected leader of the Liberal Party, Lester B. Pearson, today was the subject of congratulations from many quarters. Political foes as well as friends paid tribute to his high personal qualities.

Meanwhile loser in the leadership election, Hon. Paul Martin, received applause from all sides of the Commons when he entered the chamber for today's sittings.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, confined to his home with a back ailment, issued the text of a telegram he had sent to Mr. Pearson. It said:

"My warmest congratulations are extended to you on the achievement of the highest honor your party can offer, which carries with it the great responsibilities of leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in Parliament. With all good wishes for continued health and happiness."

Mr. Pearson, who will not take his seat in the Commons as Opposition leader until Monday, replied by telegram:

"Please accept my warm appreciation of your friendly message of congratulations on my election as leader of the Liberal party. Kindest personal regards."

At United Nations headquarters, Mr. Pearson's winning of the leadership of Canada's Liberal party gratified his many admirers on the banks of the East River.

It's safe to say no statesman of any country has been more popular than Pearson over the years with the diplomats and newsmen who regularly attend the sessions of the General Assembly and the Security Council.

"Pearson is one diplomat who never leads with his chin, yet never ducks a hard question," explained one veteran correspondent. "He weaves an almost hypnotic spell at times over even the most insulated of his colleagues and the most hard-boiled reporters."

Another said "Mike Pearson is the most approachable big shot I know. Very few American newsmen ever got to know Henry Cabot Lodge well enough to call him 'Cabot.' Nearly everybody soon learns to call Mr. Pearson 'Mike' and feel he is being neither familiar nor disrespectful."

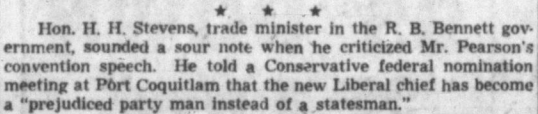

Other comments:

"Pearson is by all odds the best speaker the UN has ever heard. He always is courageous and witty—and to the point."

"The Canadians missed Pearson in the Assembly session just ended. The new Conservative delegation hardly has had time to get its feet good and wet—and when people around here think of what Canada's going to do or say, they still think of Pearson first."

Robert Strachan, provincial CCF leader, said he thinks Mr. Pearson has tremendous ability, but he added "ability as a politician requires party politics, which until now the Liberals have lacked."

Hon. H. H. Stevens, trade minister in the R. B. Bennett government, sounded a sour note when he criticized Mr. Pearson's convention speech. He told a Conservative federal nomination meeting at Port Coquitlam that the new Liberal chief has become a "prejudiced party man instead of a statesman."

The Royal Commission'll find out what th' schools are teachin'. Lot o' th' kids w'd like t' know too.

Seems like th' Lib'l convention put in a Pearson t' Pearson long-distance call.

Bet th' th' fust Canadian political convention that stirred much int'rest at th' UN.

STIFF TAXES
HIT INCOMES IN BRITAIN

LONDON (AP)—Only 600 persons in Britain had incomes of £6,000 ($16,800) or more last year after paying the country's stiff income taxes, the government reported today.

The basic income tax in Britain is 42½ per cent, and the take rises steeply along with income.

Scots Want
Margaret
As Queen

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP)—Scottish nationalists suggested on Thursday night that Princess Margaret be made Queen of Scotland.

The idea arose at a public meeting sponsored in this capital city by the Scottish patriot movement, which has campaigned for years for home rule.

"It might be the happy way out of a rather difficult situation," said Miss Wendy Wood, a veteran nationalist who heads the patriot movement.

"I mean no disrespect to the present sovereign, Queen Elizabeth is the Queen that England wants."

"She has the characteristics that English people like, but it is not possible to have characteristics which both the Scots and the English appreciate."

Party Planning
Early Caucus

By C. R. BLACKBURN

OTTAWA (CP)—Lester B. Pearson, newly-chosen Liberal leader, faces the immediate problem of organizing his party's attitude toward trying to force a general election.

It is believed Mr. Pearson, elected leader at the national convention which ended Thursday night, is of the opinion that the Opposition should set out to defeat the minority Progressive Conservative government as swiftly as possible and force an election.

A major opportunity for an amendment expressing want of confidence in the government will be offered Monday afternoon on a formal government motion to move the Commons into committee on the administration's spending estimates.

There have been rumors that the Liberals would take Monday's opportunity to make their first move of the session to upset the government.

But it is reported that more party stalwarts oppose that than favor it.

Mr. Pearson told reporters Thursday night that was something to be decided in caucus and that the caucus would be very soon. "For events are crowding in on us."

So far, the official Liberal opposition has followed its promise made at the start of the session in mid-October—that it would not initiate or vote for any motions seeking the overthrow of the government until the new administration has had a chance to present its program of legislation.

The 265-seat Commons comprises 113 Conservatives, 106 Liberals, 25 CCF, 19 Social Credit and two independent members. The Liberals would need the help of at least 27 other members to defeat the government, assuming both major parties are at full strength.

Both the CCF and the Social Credit have offered want-of-confidence motions at the current session but have not been supported by the Liberals.

There always is a possibility that the government itself might seek dissolution and call a new election.

Edmonton Stop
Granted CPA
On Polar Hops

OTTAWA (CP)—Transport Minister Hees announced in the Commons today that the air transport board has granted Canadian Pacific Airlines permission to pick up or debark passengers at Edmonton on its polar air route between Vancouver and Amsterdam.

Its previous stopping point on the route was Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories and Edmonton-area passengers wishing to use the route had to go to Vancouver or Yellowknife.

Mr. Hees also announced approval for Trans-Canada Air Lines to start two new air services to Belgium and Switzerland.

Oil Trade Jeopardized

Canada Warns U.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has suggested to the United States government that its action in asking voluntary restriction of oil imports, including Canadian crude, is jeopardizing oil trade between the two countries.

In a strongly worded protest note sent to Washington and tabled today in the Commons, the Canadian administration said that Canada's imports of American oil in 1956 exceeded $100,000,000 r.h.

"Surely it is unwise," the note added, "to jeopardize this two-way trade which works to the benefit of both countries."

HUTCHISON

fatherly air were all missing from this speech.

So, too, were those "pulsating platitudes" and self-hypnosis which he attributed to his opponent Diefenbaker.

Pearson began with the familiar "boyish grin, the homespun pleasantry, the disarming look of innocence, the hands thrust casually into the coat pockets, the black-rimmed spectacles sliding from his nose."

He finished with clenched fists, hoarse voice and the blows of a sledge hammer. And in the course of this transformation he laid down so all could see the battle lines of his election campaign.

The campaign thus revealed is based on three propositions.

First, the Liberal Party governed Canada well in Canada's greatest years but can do still better on its return to power.

Second, the Conservative government is not responsible for all the nation's economic troubles but has gravely worsened them by timidity, hesitation, confusion, concealment of vital facts and especially by mismanagement of foreign trade.

Third, the Liberal Party and only the Liberal Party can rescue the nation from the last seven months of blundering and unemployment, but must not promise impossibilities or make national business a "give away program or a lottery."

This will be Pearson's approach to the political crisis scheduled to break next week, and his approach will have far more effect on Liberal policy than the party's new platform.

Ended in New Upsurge of Confidence

The public will soon forget the platform. Pearson will be around for a long time yet.

So ended the Liberal Party's fourth national convention in a new upsurge of confidence, most of it built on the personality of one man.

That man, dog tired now but still grinning, was led by a pipe band upstairs to a littered room where he faced a battery of inquisitive reporters.

After they were finished with their inquisition could Pearson escape at last to his home and his preparations for next week's crucial events.

But there was more to the convention than his elevation to leadership.

While the minds of the delegates and the nation were concentrated on a vivid human being the Liberal party was laboriously executing a fundamental shift of policy comparable only to its great shift under King into the welfare state.

When it assembled in Ottawa the party had to consider, apart from leadership, one simple but urgent question—should it maintain the stern posture of its last years in office or should it move sharply leftwards and seek to outrun the Diefenbaker government in the pursuit of social reform?

That choice has now been made. The party has moved sharply to the left and far beyond the government in the promise of a better society for all Canadians.

The new platform leaves no doubt on this score.

New Liberalism Broad, Costly

Though the party has returned to its oldest principles in sponsoring free trade with Britain and lower tariffs in general, it has pressed forward the new Liberalism on a broad and costly front.

Contributory old age pensions at 65 years of age, a form of parity prices for farmers, a scheme of health in addition to hospital insurance, new federal aid to education, low-cost housing, large public works to relieve unemployment, deliberate deficits to stimulate business by the Keynesian Theory—all these and other reforms are designed to retrieve the clothes of radicalism which the Tories stole last June while the St. Laurent government was in bathing.

The promises of the platform are outlined in detail, but as at the Conservative convention of 1956 no one has stopped yet to reckon up their cost.

Mr. Pearson evidently had it in mind, however, when in a significant warning to his followers he bluntly pledged himself to stand against irresponsible clamor for excessive public services that would mean big government and big bureaucracy.

Nevertheless large new costs are quite explicit in the Liberal policy as laid down by the convention.

Period of Heavy Deficits Ahead

There are great inflationary pressures in it also and undoubtedly under any available government a period of heavy deficits ahead.

If the Conservative and Liberal conventions represented it accurately, this kind of policy is what the Canadian people want. Assuredly they will get it in the visible future.

The convention delegates were not thinking of these things as they went home.

They were thinking of Mike Pearson and the party's new unity as symbolized by their last glimpse of him, his hand held aloft by a defeated but smiling Paul Martin.

ship, like the whole party, seemed united, friendly and confident after an unnoted human incident which presented in allegory a revealing image of the new down-to-earth age in Liberal politics.

Martin, who seldom carries money with him, begged a cup of coffee from a newspaper correspondent and then begged a cafeteria lunch from Pearson, who readily agreed, but, picking up the cheque, found that he had only 30c in his pocket.

He borrowed a couple of dollars and paid the cashier. That could never have happened to Laurier, King or St. Laurent in an era now well and truly buried.

NEW LIBERAL LEADER 'FINE MAN'—BENNETT

Premier Bennett said today he thinks the new Liberal Party leader, Lester Pearson, is "personally a very fine man and a fine Canadian."

The Premier said the wrong interpretation had been placed on a remark he made Thursday that neither Mr. Pearson nor Paul Martin were fit to hold office as prime minister.

What he meant, Mr. Bennett said, was that both men were unfit only in the sense they were members of the previous Liberal government and share responsibility for present economic conditions which he says were brought on by tight money policies.

minister dropped his customary gloved diplomatic approach and let go with a sharp political blast against the Conservatives.

The resolutions adopted by the three-day Liberal convention, he said, were a startling and stimulating contrast to those passed at the 1956 Conservative convention. The Conservative resolutions were "born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history."

"CRITICAL TIME"

"At this critical time, government is more than a give-away program or a national lottery."

An MP for Algoma East, Ont., since 1948, he said he would give the party energetic, aggressive leadership, "but not narrowly partisan." He might make mistakes but "I can promise you that they will be honest mistakes."

Then, turning to the retiring leader, Louis St. Laurent, he added: "I want to say to him that we still need him in the active ranks of the party as long as he is willing to serve."

Mr. Pearson has asked Mr. St. Laurent to remain as opposition leader in the Commons until next Monday.

While promising delegates that he soon will attempt to lead the Liberals back to power, he gave no indication of how he plans to do this.

"This first task is to convince the Canadian people that, already, they need us again to manage their affairs."

GROWING CONCERN

Though the Conservatives had been only seven months in office, there was growing concern in the country over trade and unemployment.

"Now it would be foolish and unfair to blame the government for everything that has gone wrong—and much has—since last June. We will not talk and act in that regard as they did when they were in opposition."

But the Conservatives had created an atmosphere of uncertainty—"the propaganda which the Conservatives seem to think will hypnotize the Canadian people into believing what is not true seems likely only to hypnotize themselves."

Unemployment was a challenge to society, a challenge which a Liberal government, unlike the Conservatives, would meet. It also would meet farm problems.

But the party's first job was organization. It had to have "and will have—at once—a strong, decentralized organization based on our constituency associations."

TO TRAVEL WIDELY

"To see that we have it, I am prepared to travel widely across the length and breadth of this country. I want to meet you and hear your views as to what we should be doing to maintain and strengthen the organization of this party."

"Then our renewed and strengthened organization must put forth our message of a new and strong and progressive Liberalism."

"With the right policies—and right organization—we will soon be returned to office again. That is the greatest service we now can perform for Canada."

James G. Gardiner and 56 for former air minister (now senator) C. G. (Chubby) Power.

The late Mackenzie King got in as a dark horse in 1919. Previous leaders were chosen by the top party advisers.

After Thursday night's voting Mr. Pearson got quick unanimity from the convention of his selection, at Mr. Martin's motion, and his former colleague pledged full support.

He promptly promised to lead the Liberals back to power "soon" and blasted the Conservatives with one of the strongest political attacks he has made since he came out of the neutrality of a career civil servant to become minister of external affairs in 1938.

Platform resolutions adopted at the 1956 convention that chose John G. Diefenbaker as Conservative leader, he said, were born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history.

Mr. Martin, who had waged an intensive fight for the leadership, met the convention verdict with a smile and said to the delegates: "You have just elected the next prime minister of Canada."

GRASS ROOTS APPEAL

The former health minister's supporters had based much of their campaign on the contention that he had appeal for the "grass roots" as opposed to the party brass supposedly supporting Mr. Pearson.

Former agriculture minister Gardiner was the only former cabinet colleague to back Mr. Martin publicly, partly because of an expressed belief that Mr. Martin is the best vote-catcher in the country.

Mr. St. Laurent maintained an air of outward neutrality, but it was reported he favored Mr. Pearson, his successor as external affairs minister.

Right after the vote, Mr. St. Laurent urged party workers to get solidly behind Mr. Pearson and expressed confidence he will become prime minister at the next election.

Later, it was announced that although the Commons sits today Mr. St. Laurent—at the new leader's request—will remain as Opposition leader until Monday, when Mr. Pearson will take over.

The new leader, who has sat in the Commons for northern Ontario's Algoma East mining constituency since 1948, will carry into the next election virtually a brand new platform from the one with which the Liberals went down to defeat last June 10 after 22 years of uninterrupted power.

B.C. Man Gets Share In Williamson Mine

DAR-ES-SALAAM, Tanganyika (Reuters) — John Williamson, Canadian multi-millionaire diamond magnate who died earlier this month, left 800 shares in his mine to his brother and sister, it was announced today.

His brother, Percy Boyd Williamson, of Kelowna, B.C., already owned 300 of the 1,200 shares in the Mwadui diamond mine.

Williamson and his sister,

Mrs. Alex R. Millar, announced the majority shares will remain in the Williamson family and said they do not intend to sell the mine.

I. C. Chopra, the late mine owner's legal adviser and friend, owns 100 shares in the mine. He and Percy Williamson will be the new company directors.

Percy Williamson, who arrived here earlier this week, and Mrs. Millar, who is believed to be living in London, were the only close relatives of Williamson.

Handwriting Expert Offers to Assist PTA In Guidance of 'Problem' School Children

Victoria handwriting expert Harry Hamlett has offered his services to the Parent-Teachers' Association of Greater Victoria.

He believes his long experience of grapho-analysis (analyzing characteristics of handwriting) would assist the PTA in the guidance of problem children.

"Grapho-analysis has been used very successfully among school children in France and in many parts of the United States," Mr. Hamlett said.

"In one school district in France the handwriting of some 600 children was analyzed and the personal problems revealed in this study enabled the education authorities to effect an improvement in 500 of these children."

Mr. Hamlett says he has given instruction to two Victoria detectives in the study of forgery by grapho-analysis.

"They showed me a cheque and I was able to prove that the figure on it had been raised from $5 to $50. My study showed that the figure $5 had been bleached out and the higher figure substituted in an almost identical ink."

A lean, good-humored enthusiast, Mr. Hamlett believes the study of grapho-analysis has been neglected in Canada both by police and educational authorities.

"The police of Indiana have to take an eight-week course in grapho-analysis following their regular training in crime detection," he said, "and the authorities have proved that it pays off."

"I cannot understand why so many organizations in Canada shut their eyes to this work."

Grapho-analysis is the study, not so much of handwriting as of handwriting characteristics. Thus, Mr. Hamlett finds that people with a strong forward stroke are usually good-natured extroverts while those with a pronounced backward slope tend to be moody introverts.

Many people write to him for an analysis of their writing and sometimes he examines letters from engaged couples.

"I can usually tell from their writing whether they will be compatible in marriage," he claims.

UBC Dean Heads Schools Inquiry

Financing Woes Excluded From New Investigation

Appointment of a three-man royal commission to make a "space age" inquiry into the B.C. educational system was announced today by Education Minister Peterson.

The investigation is concerned mainly with curriculum, rather than methods

It will look into the entire educational system up to the university level and is the first of its kind since 1925.

Chairman of the commission is Dean S. N. F. Chant of the University of B.C.

The other members are John E. Liersch, executive vice-president of the Powell River Co. and a former head of the UBC department of forestry; and R. P. Walrod, general manager of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd. and a member of the board of management of the B.C. Research Council.

Mr. Chant is dean of the faculty of arts and science at UBC and head of the department of philosophy and psychology.

LONG STUDY

In making the announcement, Mr. Peterson said the government expected a "searching inquiry" and indicated he expected the commission will take some time to complete its work and write a report.

"In the light of the grim international competition that lies ahead," the minister said, "it is desirable to have an examination made of our courses of studies, our aims, and our methods, by an independent and impartial commission with a view to the further strengthening of our school system."

Mr. Peterson said he believes B.C. has a good school system, but "no school system is so good that it cannot, and should not, be improved."

RESTRICTED

Terms of reference set out in an order-in-council approved by the cabinet today restrict the commission from inquiring into methods and distribution of school financing.

Otherwise the terms are very broad, the minister said, and allow a study of the "general economics" of the school system.

Mr. Peterson said he did not believe the same commission should look into both curriculum and financing.

However, teachers' salaries, scholarships and other general economic questions will be within the scope of the commission.

HEARINGS

It is expected that public hearings will be held around the province, and teachers' groups and school trustee boards will be asked to make submissions.

Among subjects the commission will examine, Mr. Peterson said, are these:

Length of the school day; term and high school program; discipline; utilization of school facilities; construction and operation of schools.

At the same time, Mr. Peterson announced that his department is going ahead with plans to introduce more mathematics and science into the general high school program beginning with the new term next fall.

There are those who express the view that the advent of Sputniks I and II demand a drastic revamping of our curriculum to place greater emphasis on science and mathematics," he said.

One of the main aims of the

WAS SMOKEY IN POKEY?

After a year's absence from his home at 1587 Wilmut Place, where he lived with Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Crawford, a three-year-old Persian tomcat came back Thursday.

There was no explanation for his absence, nor any reason known for his departure.

The cat, Smokey by name, has been identified as one which had been visiting on Falkland Road for the past month.

But his whereabouts for the balance of his missing year are unknown.

He has resumed residence at Wilmut Place as if nothing had happened.

City Police Ask 21% Wage Boost

Victoria policemen's union today asked a 21 per cent wage increase, which would boost the salary of a first-class constable to about $436 a month.

The proposed new wage agreement was presented to the Victoria police commission by union president Constable Lorne Shandley and a delegation of officers.

In presenting the wage request, Constable Shandley pointed out Vancouver and West Vancouver police are now paid $397 monthly, compared to the present Victoria wage of $359.

Other proposals put forward by the union called for a retirement gratuity of one month's pay and a death benefit of six weeks' pay for officer's dependents if he dies while on the force.

FRINGE BENEFITS

Fringe benefits requested included issue by the department of service ribbons, as required by entitled war veterans on the force, and issuance of short-barrel pistols with spring holsters for detectives, to replace the heavy revolvers now issued.

The policemen also have asked three days' compassionate leave in event of a death in the immediate family, or five days when travel is required.

'FANTASTIC'

Oak Bay councillor Geoffrey Ellis, chairman of the council's negotiating committee, today termed "fantastic" wage demands of municipal firemen asking boosts ranging from 25.4 per cent to 52.9 per cent.

"They are asking the same wages as the Vancouver fire department," he said, "but the hazards are not to be compared. Oak Bay is a quiet residential district."

Last negotiations established able for reconditioning by our handicapped workers.

"We can also use books and magazines suitable for re-sale."

FOR WAGES

The income from sales goes to pay workers' wages and cost of operations.

Needed workshop equipment are industrial sewing machines, an industrial darning, a Hoffman steam press, a Suzzie press, a cessal iron and board, a washing machine and drier.

Goodwill is now employing a paid staff of 12 handicapped workers and hopes to increase the number to 15 before the end of January.

Goodwill Enterprises in Victoria is one of 200 in Canada and the United States giving employment to thousands of handicapped men and women.

ASK The TIMES

Q—Could you tell me what other provinces besides B.C. make it compulsory for those over 70 to undergo a medical examination at their own expense to hold driving licences? And must tourists obtain a driving permit?—W.J.C.

A—The provinces are not uniform in driving tests for those over 70. They vary, as does payment for medical check-ups for driving. It is not compulsory for a tourist entering B.C. to obtain a driver's permit. He can operate in B.C. for six months on his permit originating in his place of residence.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums.

Hardly front page news, but...

Owner of B.C. auto licence plate 100 is, appropriately enough, Lawrie Wallace, chairman of the B.C. Centennial committee... too bad he doesn't drive a truck, so he could have C-100... personally, I'd like licence plate 1,000—100 doesn't seem nearly old enough for me... but all this is academic... who can see the plates well enough to read the numbers?... and I'm told Lawrie has taken down his Christmas decorations at last... but his white house on Fairfield Road still looks bright and gay, what with Century Sam on the lawn and a king-size Centennial flag waving bravely overhead...

Street seen: Two gentlemen so deeply engrossed in conversation they stepped off the curb at View to cross Douglas as the light changed... crossed to mid-street against the amber, completed the crossing strolling and talking, obviously unaware they were against the red light... traffic waited patiently with nary a horn toot... for the gentlemen in question were police officers... no, I don't know their names, and if I did, you think I'd publish them?... hah!...

Lester B. Pearson certainly had his Victory speech well prepared for the TV broadcast... wonder if Paul Martin put in as much time preparing HIS... just in case he won?... slogan for political pundits, for once, can be: Never were so many so right... but I don't think they'll be able to say the same on their forecasts for a spring election... (remember this if I'm right, forget it if I'm wrong)...

Nomination for the opening sentence in a press release to end all opening sentences in press releases: "A tremendous event, involving the most fantastic magnitude of construction machinery ever placed on the market at one time..." Come, come, now. No understatements, please.

A federal explosives inspector has ordered an immediate stop to the building and firing of rockets in B.C., and no doubt the order will be enforced.

Wonder if he couldn't arrange a similar order for Russia—at least until the Western world catches up.

Final sad thought in regard to Mike Pearson: The Liberals have gained a leader, but the Times has lost a columnist.

EVERYBODY WANTS TO GO ABOARD SATURDAY

Leilani Passes Snapped Up

The decks have been cleared at Ogden Point dock for the 8 p.m. Saturday arrival of Ss. Leilani, Hawaiian cruise ship which will embark about 100 passengers here.

Inside the big freight shed only a few piles of plywood and one small bundle of freight is on hand, leaving plenty of room to handle baggage, sightseeing buses, and cars of dignitaries who will be on hand to welcome the ship on her first voyage here.

"Century Sam," symbolic figure in B.C.'s centennial celebrations, will distribute bags of gold among passengers aboard the holiday cruise ship Leilani when she docks at Ogden Point Saturday night.

It should be added that the bags contain chocolate coins wrapped in gold foil. But the intent is shown on the tag, which says:

"Here's a bag of gold from Century Sam in Victoria, 1958."

But the general public will not be allowed beyond barriers at the entrance to the freight shed, unless in possession of boarding passes.

And today, boarding passes, like Grey Cup tickets and hen's teeth, are non-existent.

Each of the passengers boarding here has been allowed a limited number of tickets for friends and relatives who wish to see them off.

Other boarding tickets have been issued to Chamber of Commerce officials and others.

1,000 VISITORS

The ship's owners expect close to 1,000 visitors to clamber aboard while the Leilani is in port, from 8 p.m. to sailing time at 11.59 p.m.

S. C. Arvison, dock agent, anticipates no trouble in handling the 18,000-ton, 622-foot ship. The regular lines crew will be supplemented by on-duty longshoremen, if necessary.

Tugs for docking will be supplied by Island Tug and Barge Ltd.

Official welcoming party for the ship will be headed by Mayor Percy B. Scurrah. He will be greeted aboard by the shipmaster, Commodore Sven M. A. Rogenes, and taken on a tour of the ship.

KOA BOWL

At a ceremony in the master's suite, the commodore, on behalf of Hon. William F. Quinn, governor of Territorial Hawaii, will present a Koa Bowl to Hon. William N. Chant, who will accept it as a gesture of friendship to the premier of B.C.

The mayor will be presented with a key to the city of Honolulu, on behalf of Mayor Neal S. Balisdel.

Public Panel

On Amalgamation

A public panel on the much-debated question of amalgamation for Greater Victoria will be held in Victoria High School auditorium Feb. 25 at 8 p.m.

Eric Mallett, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce public affairs group, announced today

Taking part will be Eric Hardy, Toronto, executive director of the Citizen's Research Institute of Canada; Forrest L. Shaw as moderator; Reeves A. C. Wurtele, Arthur Ash and Fred Norris.

Mayor Percy Scurrah has also been invited to participate and questions will be invited from the audience.

PUBLISHER'S NOTEBOOK

The Great Hockey Hassle

There are a couple of aspects of the current ice-hockey dustup which I find decidedly distasteful.

No matter how one feels about Colin Kilburn, it seemed to me pretty poor pool when a vocal section of the crowd Wednesday evening began to boo Pat Egan, who played a whale of a game and is an innocent bystander to the whole guff.

Secondly, I have nothing but contempt for the yahoos who vilified Dr. Andy Reid, president of the Cougars, and his wife, as they sat watching the game the other night.

Anyone who knows Andy Reid knows that he is a sincere, honorable sportsman whose only interest is in giving Victoria a contending hockey club.

In private life he is a skilled surgeon, with a host of devoted patients. He took on the presidency of the Cougars at a crucial stage in their career and worked as hard as anyone to keep the game alive in this area. In this he has been helped by his wife, who wears a Booster Club button and is as loyal a fan as Ireland ever produced.

Reid devotes a lot of time to hockey without a cent of pay. Anything he does, he does from honest conviction.

What has happened here is what the diplomats call "a breakdown in communication." As long as a month ago, Dr. Reid found he could not get the answers out of Colin. With the club sinking further behind every game, the president began to wonder if the Cougars had passed the point of rebuilding, and determined to find out why.

He called Colin into an office, closed the door, and indulged in some plain talk. It wasn't too satisfactory an air-cleaning. And that was the beginning of the end.

The end came when Colin "went through the roof" on Sunday. His bitter remarks left no elbow room, no door open for a reconciliation. Directors who liked the manager, and wanted to be generous in their treatment of him, ended up with different views.

If fans disagree with the directors' decision, they must accept the fact that the club should be run by a player whose won-loss record is the worst in our history, and whose judgment of hockey talent has been demonstrably weak.

A case in point is Don Chiupka. Kilburn always insisted that the Prairie boy was unworthy of Cougar livery, and last year kept him on the bench most of the season. This year Chiupka has scored 11 goals against us, including a cruncher Wednesday night.

The fans may disagree. But they are a mile off base when they abuse Dr. Reid, a decent fellow who is trying to do what he thinks is right.

Iron Ore Operation Shuts Down

Weather is forcing the immediate closure of the Empire Development Co. Ltd. iron ore operation at Port McNeill, where 120 men will be thrown out of work, but the provincial iron ore tax will govern its re-opening.

It was planned to start operating in April, company president James A. Scott announced today in Vancouver, but directors plan a reappraisal of unforeseen production costs, particularly of the tax, which was imposed just as the plant came into production.

"Although iron ore production has been carried on for years in B.C. by American and other interests," Mr. Scott said, "our company, the most recent large-scale producer, is entirely Canadian controlled but the most severely burdened by the new tax."

He said firm contracts were entered into before development of the iron ore deposits, and that all were financed on the basis of known and ascertainable costs and taxes at the time.

Port McNeill, scene of the company's operation, is 120 miles north of Campbell River. Facilities include an 18-mile haul road, beneficiation plant, and ore mining and ship-loading installations.

Stanley R. Stewart, 911 Caledonia, was sentenced in city police court today to 21 days in jail to be served concurrently, on each of three charges of careless driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving while his licence was under suspension.

In passing sentence, Magistrate H. C. Hall noted the accused had been fined for careless driving and failing to remain "less than two months ago." At that time his licence was suspended.

Robert Francis McIsaac, 238 Douglas, was fined $50 in city police court Thursday for having liquor in a restaurant illegally.

Veteran of 17 years in the RCAF, James Ashworth, 38, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ashworth, 2455 Beach, has been promoted to squadron leader.

He has served as a fighter pilot in India and Burma, as commanding officer at Tofino, and since 1957 as a member of the Alouette Fighter Squadron.

William James Falconer, 944 Darwin, was fined $25 and Henry Eng, 3475 Quadra, was fined $20 in Saanich police court Thursday for failing to obey an order of the fire marshal.

Mahinder Singh, 583 Dupplin, proprietor of Hilecrest Fuel, was fined $55 in Saanich police court Thursday for operating a business without a trades licence.

John H. Creed, 18, of R.R. 1, Brentwood Bay, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at 11.30 a.m. today with a broken thumb and lacerations to the left knee suffered in a traffic accident at the corner of Herald and Douglas.

Creed had been riding a motorcycle north on Douglas when he was in collision with a truck being driven east on Herald by Dyer Munn, 1157 Burdett.

Victoria council fire wardens committee was to meet later today for study of three proposed sites for the new main fire hall.

The problem of where to locate the new $300,000 hall was tossed into the air again Thursday when a meeting of council could not agree on a site proposed by the committee.

SHOPPING GUIDE

By PENNY SAVER

Browsing in a local grocery store this morning, I found myself poking and prying around the novelty palatables with an intense interest! I found little tins of such rarities as colored coffee, sugar and instant Yorkshire pudding. Both are imported from England. The colored coffee sugar can be used also as topping for desserts and cakes and it comes at 45 cents a package.

Instant Yorkshire pudding is rather unusual as it is not only a batter for pudding, but it can be used for pancakes, too! A package of this mix is 19 cents.

Also on the shelf here I found 25 cents packages of imported German pumpernickel. As you probably know, pumpernickel is a bread of coarse, unbolted rye. Spread with butter it's extremely tasty!

Now, here is something different! If roasted quail appeals to you (it doesn't to me, but I'm soft-hearted) you'll be interested in the cans of smoked quail in town now. Though it's an hors d'oeuvre, my readers who are willing to try anything once, might like the idea! Expensive though it is, it is delicious, I'm told. It comes at $1.10 a tin.

Getting down to the business of economizing for the weekend, I find that one of the most inexpensive meats to consume (especially in a large family) is veal. There are veal patties at 37 cents a pound. This with acorn squash at 12 cents pound, makes an economical and quick Saturday evening dinner.

It's a well known fact that when the shopper buys certain foods in bulk, pennies are saved. This is true too of gallon tins of fruit cocktail. For $1.59 a gallon tin, the wise shopper can really stock up on this delicious fruit mix for desserts and cocktails... a winter treat for hard-to-plan meals!

If this next item isn't pennyless, I don't know what is! For 99 cents the smart shopper can buy a pound and a half of high quality bacon. It's fresh stock, too.

The British have got something with their morning tea breaks and their afternoon tea high teas! A fine brand of tea (that is English tea) has lots to do with it. It has wonderful flavor and an amazing pick-me-up quality! It's 98 cents a pound where I shop and it's imported from England!

Where? Don't be shy. Phone me at 2-3131.

RESPONSIBILITIES FOR BRIDEGROOM'S MOTHER

What part does the mother of the groom play at his wedding? If the wedding rehearsal is after dinner, would ice cream and cake be sufficient to serve later? If there is to be a party before the late rehearsal, what would be appropriate to serve?

LOUISE DAVIS ANSWERS:

The bridegroom's mother is a top priority guest at the wedding and at the reception. At the service, she sits in the front in the section to the right of the centre aisle. At the reception, she stands beside the bride's parents. She has no other responsibilities. She does not contribute to any of the wedding or reception expenses. I should think that ice cream and cake would be enough to serve at an after rehearsal party, assuming that members of the bridal party will have previously had some kind of a substantial meal. These affairs usually break up early so that the young people can have a good night's sleep, and serving anything elaborate, such as a late buffet supper, is apt to delay them. If there is to be a party before a late rehearsal, a dinner is in order, but planned early enough so that the bridal party will be punctual for the rehearsal.

Take a Chance—Toastmistress Dinner Theme

Miss Elisabeth Baess was table topic mistress at last meeting of Victoria Toastmistress Club held in Monterey Restaurant. She introduced Mrs. B. R. Grant, Mrs. J. A. de Bourcier and Mrs. E. Gordon, all of whom spoke on the evening's theme "Take a Chance."

Toastmistress was Miss Barbara Helm, Miss M. Nyland, a new member, gave her beginner's speech. Others on the program were Mrs. W. McAllister, Miss Maudie Cottingham, Mrs. T. Warren, Miss Helen Egan, Mrs. T. Ward, Miss Grace Mitchell, Mrs. G. McKay, Mrs. Robert MacMillan and Mrs. A. Rose.

Vote of thanks was given by Miss Audrey Harness. Critics were Mrs. B. Grant and Mrs. L. Prevost and the evaluator, Mrs. V. Carter.

Miss Helm won the "Oscar" for best speech of the evening, and Mrs. McAllister, the "spur" for showing the greatest improvement.

TEMPLE CHIEF AND HER OFFICERS

Mrs. Anne Carlson, second from right, seated, was installed head of Island Temple No. 8, Pythian Sisters, last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Carlson's officers for the year are, seated from the left, Mrs. Ruby McGowan, Mrs. Adella Banks, Mrs. Vera Berry, and standing, Miss Vera Mesher, PC; Mrs. Hilda Johnson, Mrs. Mary Nordby, Mrs. Minnie Unwin and Mrs. Constance Mullen, PC. Installing officer was Mrs. H. Banks, assisted by Mrs. V. Flint, and Mrs. N. Ryan. Pianist was Mrs. V. Bayly. The retiring chief, Mrs. Banks, was presented with a gift from the Temple.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Fat Knees Are Cute—Don't Be Too Quick to Reduce

(The Friday Question Box)

Q.—"What can I do to get rid of fat knees. I am not overweight but my knees are fat."

A.—Don't be too quick to try to banish them. Most folks think that dimples are prettier than bones. As a matter of fact, it is most difficult to reduce the knees. Vigorous massage or kneading the fat on the knees between the fingers and heels of the hands may be helpful. Also, try this exercise. Stand facing the wall with your hands on the wall for support. Bend the right knee as far back as possible. Return foot to floor. Bend the left knee as far back as possible. Return left foot to the floor. Continue, alternating right and left.

Q.—"I am 15½ years old. 5 feet 2½ inches tall and weigh 99 pounds. Should I lose or gain?"

A.—You are a lot underweight and should gain.

Q.—"I am 5 feet 8½ inches tall and weigh 151 pounds. My bust measures 35, waist 27 and hips 40 inches. Please tell me what is wrong with my measurements and how I can improve them."

A.—You are not much overweight for your height. I would guess that you should lose about five pounds. Take hip and waist slimming exercises while watching your diet a bit. Your hips are most out of proportion.

Q.—"Please tell me what is wrong with my friend's measurements. She is small boned. Height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 108 pounds; bust, 32 inches; waist, 24 inches."

A.—Your friend is about 15 pounds underweight. Her measurements are good.

Planning an Open House? Wondering what beverage you can serve that will appeal to all? How about trying a hot soup punch? For instance, Soup au Lait is simply made from canned condensed beef broth heated with an equal amount of milk. Top with silvered almonds for an extra festive touch.

urements are in good ratio. She should gain all over.

Q.—"Can you tell me how late in the fall one can wear patent leather slippers? Can you wear them through the winter?"

A.—Patent leather shoes usually are thought of as shoes for spring. In other words, they usually are worn with lightweight clothes through the spring, summer and very early fall.

Q.—"I have such large hands that I am self-conscious. I try not to be but just can't help it. What could I do to make them look smaller?"

A.—You are certain to make them more noticeable if you are self-conscious about them because in trying to hide them you will assume awkward positions. Do forget them except to see that they are well groomed. It also would be best to avoid bright nail polish.

TODAY'S RECIPE

COTTAGE PUDDING, FRUIT SAUCE

Pudding: 1/2 cup shortening, 1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sauce: 2 cups canned fruit cocktail, 1 cup syrup from fruit cocktail, 1/2 cup water, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/2 cup sugar, few grains salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Pudding: Soften shortening in mixing bowl. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add to shortening with unbeaten egg, milk and vanilla. Beat for two minutes. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) 30 to 35 minutes. Cut into squares and serve warm with cocktail sauce. Sauce: Drain fruit cocktail.

Heat syrup and water. Add cornstarch, sugar and salt blended together and cook and stir until clear and thickened. Add fruit cocktail and cook 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and blend in lemon juice and rind. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Life Member—A highlight of the annual meeting of Fairfield United Women's Association was the life membership certificates presented to Mrs. F. Hunter and Mrs. E. G. Freeman. Mrs. B. C. Bracewell was elected president. Other officers are Mrs. C. B. Lowe, first vice-president; Mrs. O. Oliphant, second; Miss M. Stains, third; Mrs. J. Hill, secretary; Mrs. B. Baird, treasurer; Mrs. Oliphant, kitchen; Mrs. Alf Schroeder, flowers; Mrs. J. Houston, Mrs. R. Dorman and Mrs. Lowe, manse. Installation service was conducted by Rev. R. Haythorne. Plans were made for the annual pot luck supper on Jan. 22.

No Move to Opposition Residence 'Silly to Move Twice'—Mrs. Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Mrs. Maryon Pearson wore "an old hat I found in the cupboard" to the national Liberal convention that chose her husband as its new leader Thursday night.

Lester B. Pearson, former external affairs minister and 1957 Nobel Peace Prize winner, won the post in an overwhelming victory over two candidates.

The white hat his wife wore with a blue, scoop-neck silk dress was of ostrich tips.

"I don't think I really doubted my husband's winning," said tall, black-haired Mrs. Pearson, a native of Winnipeg. Then, anticipating reporters' questions, she added:

"How do I feel? I feel fine."

MOVE ONLY ONCE

Asked whether she would move into Stormorway, official residence of the Commons Opposition leader and now unoccupied, she quickly replied:

"Certainly not—it would be awfully silly to move twice." It was more important that she get her husband off on a holiday before March 1, she said.

The Pearsons now live in an Ottawa apartment.

Her husband, at a post-victory press conference, expressed similar feelings about Stormorway and "moving twice."

Mrs. Pearson moved to the front of the platform, beside her husband, only when delegates' shouts insisted after Mr. Pearson had delivered his speech of acceptance. She did not speak.

"Wives of Liberal leaders don't make speeches, a tradition

which I wholeheartedly endorse," she said.

She sat beside her daughter, Patricia, Mrs. Walter Hanna of Toronto, on the platform. A son, Geoffrey, is with the external affairs department.

MARRIED HER TEACHER

A former University of Toronto arts student who married her history professor, Mrs. Pearson said it never occurred to her that she would become a party leader's wife.

But both the leadership convention and the presentation of the Nobel Prize in Oslo, Norway, last month had been exciting.

She said she would travel with her husband during election campaigns "until my strength gives out."

One of the first indications of her new role was a request for her autograph.

"Nobody ever asked me for an autograph before," she said, chuckling as she scribbled her name.

Cordova Bay Guild Raises $1,535

Financial report read by Mrs. N. Westwood at annual meeting of the Women's Guild of St. David's By-The-Sea, showed $1,535 raised during the year. Main money-making events listed by secretary Mrs. T. Brown were two bazaars, a rummage sale, a tea and sale, flower show and harvest supper.

The president, Mrs. K. M. Lewis gave a report that included a note that members of the guild did a quantity of sewing for the nurses division of the Provincial Department of Health, during the year. Mrs. A. Taylor gave a report on sick and sympathy; Mrs. S. W. Tucker, on behalf of the church, thanked guild members for their year's work.

Plans were made for the annual rummage sale on Feb. 1 at 9.30 a.m. in the guild room. Announcement was made that contributions of furniture, appliances, wearable clothing and books will be accepted for this event.

Rev. R. J. Walsh presided at the election in which the following were named: Mrs. Lewis re-elected president; Mrs. J. Mitchell, vice-president; Mrs. Brown and Mrs. M. Ronald, re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Tea was served by Mrs. J. B. Minchin, Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. V. Field.

St. Louis College Mothers' Club, coffee party and bake sale, including home-made bread, Douglas Room, Hudson's Bay, Saturday from 10.45 a.m. to 1.30 p.m. Centennial dollars door prize. Proceeds in aid of college. Tickets from members or at door.

Plans were made for a rummage sale in March and serving of refreshments at the men's supper, Jan. 30.

Native Daughters Receive Chief

On Thursday evening 25 members of the Native Daughters of British Columbia, Post No. 3, entertained Mrs. R. Whisker, grand factor of the Grand Lodge of Native Daughters of B.C., and Mrs. C. Jones, grand secretary, at a dinner in the private dining room at Strathcona Hotel.

Both grand officers, on their official visit to the Post, are from Ladysmith. They were presented with corsages of yellow and white flowers.

Following dinner a meeting was held in the Orange Hall with chief factor Mrs. Jack Fouracre presiding.

During the evening three new members were initiated, Mrs. Eric Martin, Mrs. Wesley Black and Mrs. Lyle Wicks. They were welcomed by Mrs. Fouracre and presented with yellow and white corsages.

Mrs. Ida Brown told the gathering of arrangements made for a centennial tea in old Craigflower School in July; Mrs. A. Kinsman reported for the sick committee; Mrs. Brown told of the annual meeting of the B.C. Historical Society.

Mrs. Whisker addressed the meeting and later Mrs. Fouracre presented both Mrs. Whisker and Mrs. Jones with cake plates in the dogwood pattern. Tea was served by the social committee from an attractively appointed table.

STIFF TAXES HIT INCOMES IN BRITAIN

LONDON (AP)—Only 600 persons in Britain had incomes of £6,000 ($16,800) or more last year after paying the country's stiff income taxes, the government reported today.

The basic income tax in Britain is 42½ per cent, and the take rises steeply along with income.

1,250 Men Clearing Montreal Snow

MONTREAL (CP)—More than seven inches of snow have fallen on the city in the last two days and three more are expected today before snow gives way to drizzle tonight.

An army of 1,250 men and 650 pieces of equipment worked through the night clearing main streets in time for the morning rush.

U.S. Envoy Recalled From Moscow

WASHINGTON (UP)—Llewellyn E. Thompson, Jr., U.S. ambassador to Moscow, is being called home for "consultations" soon on a possible new summit conference with Russia.

Thompson, who knows the Russians well, will confer with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and may meet with President Eisenhower.

U.S. 'Polaris' Missile Test OK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States Navy launched a Polaris test missile today, and for the first time identified it as such.

The rocket took off vertically and streaked away to an undisclosed target down the air force missile test range.

Polaris is the navy's 1,500-mile intermediate range ballistic missile. It was designed for launching from submarines above or below water, as well as from aboard ships.

4 Trapped as Coal Mine Caves In SPRING CANYON, Utah (AP)—A cave-in trapped four men in the depths of a coal mine early today and rescuers said there was no way of telling whether they were dead or alive.

Chief Deputy Cheff Charles Semken said it is believed explosions followed the tremor.

Families of the men stood vigil outside the mine as 100 rescue workers tried to get to them.

HUTCHISON FROM OTTAWA

'New Kind Of Leader For New Age'

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor of The Times

CONVENTION HALL, Ottawa—Across a shouting crowd of 5,000, the man on the platform faced the portraits of three other men 10 times life-size.

But the new leader of the Liberal Party bore no resemblance outwardly or inwardly to the white-plumed Laurier, the ponderous King or the sharp-featured St. Laurent whose heir he had just become.

Lester Pearson stood there in life-size as the living portrait of a new age.

His predecessors were all Victorians and children of the nineteenth century.

He belonged to the twentieth, differing not only in look but in experience, mind and temperament from any man who ever led the Liberal party before him.

Yet, like all of them, he seemed oddly alone in the sudden loneliness of leadership though the eyes of the whole nation were upon him.

There was the true meaning of Thursday night's climactic spectacle as Canadian

Hutchison

Liberals placed their future and their hopes in Pearson's hands—a new kind of man would lead from now on in a new way. And he began to lead from that moment.

The hoarse cheers had hardly died down before he turned his formal acceptance address into a fierce opening assault upon the Diefenbaker government which he may defeat in Parliament next week.

For the first time the nation beheld in place of the suave international diplomat a fighting politician and perhaps a future prime minister delivering the greatest speech of his life.

Laurier's ducal elegance, King's tortured paragraphs and St. Laurent's grandiloquence

MACMILLAN CRITICIZED ON REPLY TO SOVIETS

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor Party today assailed Prime Minister Macmillan for failing to say "yes or no" in his reply to Premier Nikolai Bulganin's Soviet letter of Dec. 11.

Macmillan's reply, published Thursday night, gave no commitment on a Soviet-proposed summit conference within three months.

Hugh Gaitskell, Labor Party leader, said Macmillan has missed "a great opportunity to give the world the lead for which it has been waiting."

Scots Want Margaret As Queen

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP)—Scottish nationalists suggested on Thursday night that Princess Margaret be made Queen of Scotland.

The idea arose at a public meeting sponsored in this capital city by the Scottish patriot movement, which has campaigned for years for home rule.

"It might be the happy way out of a rather difficult situation," said Miss Wendy Wood, a veteran nationalist who heads the patriot movement.

"I mean no disrespect to the present sovereign. Queen Elizabeth is the Queen that England wants."

"She has the characteristics that English people like, but it is not possible to have characteristics which both the Scots and the English appreciate."

OTTAWA (CP)—Transport Minister Hees announced in the Commons today that the air transport board has granted Canadian Pacific Airlines permission to pick up or debark passengers at Edmonton on its polar air route between Vancouver and Amsterdam.

Its previous stopping point on the route was Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories and Edmonton-area passengers wishing to use the route had to go to Vancouver or Yellowknife.

Mr. Hees also announced approval for Trans-Canada Air Lines to start two new air services to Belgium and Switzerland.

'Opposition Duty To Act Like One' Says New Leader

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals have a new leader and a shined-up platform today, but it is still a toss-up as to what their immediate plans will be.

Lester B. Mike Pearson, one-time semi-pro baseball player, threw nothing but curves at reporters late Thursday night when they tried to sound him out on the prospect after his election as party leader to succeed retiring Louis St. Laurent.

"The duty of an opposition is to act like one," the 60-year-old former external affairs minister said cryptically.

The decision on party strategy would have to be made "very soon—and I mean very soon."

Political events are crowding up, he said at a post-balloting press conference, and he did not think the new party leader would have much time for the customary rest after a leadership campaign.

But that was all he left reporters to chew on, apart from saying he intends to start travelling to the West late next week, which might indicate a lack of intention to push Prime Minister Diefenbaker's minority government into an immediate defeat.

Meanwhile, Mr. Pearson stood as the most lopsided winner of any convention in the history of the party.

He rolled up 1,074 votes against 305 for Paul Martin, 54, his long-time pal and former health minister, and a single vote for Rev. H. Lloyd Henderson, 50, mayor of Portage la Prairie, Man.

Mr. St. Laurent, now 75, polled 848 in 1948 against 323 for former agriculture minister.

Judge Sets Feb. 12 For Bribery Trial

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charges of conspiracy and bribery against former Forests Minister Robert Sommers and four lumber companies were adjourned today until Feb. 12 after all but one of the defence lawyers agreed to proceed with evidence then "all day, every day" until the case ends.

After a series of adjournments dating back some two months, when the first bribery charges were laid, Magistrate Oscar Orr ordered the police court trial bound over to that day.

The lone defence hold-out, Sommers' counsel Nicholas Mussallem, said the former British Columbia cabinet minister "feels very strongly that he has a public duty" to attend the forthcoming B.C. legislature session.

The session, Mr. Mussallem said, starts Jan. 23 and is not likely to end until the end of March.

Mr. Sommers sits as Social Credit member for Rossland-Trail.

Mr. Mussallem said he will consult with Sommers and advise the court whether his client would agree with Magistrate Orr's suggestion that "This is probably as important as sitting in the legislature."

Agreement on a date was reached in a pre-session huddle among prosecutor Stewart McMorran and lawyers representing all those charged—Sommers, C. D. Schultz, H. Wilson Gray, John M. Gray, B.C. Forest Products Limited, C. D. Schultz Limited, Pacific Coast Services Limited and Evergreen Lumber Sales Limited.

Also listed in two of the charges is Hector Munro, late president of B.C. Forest Products who died last December.

Liberals Acclaim Pearson; Ponder Election Moves

By C. R. BLACKBURN

OTTAWA (CP)—Lester B. Pearson, newly-chosen Liberal leader, faces the immediate problem of organizing his party's attitude toward trying to force a general election.

It is believed Mr. Pearson, elected leader at the national convention which ended Thursday night, is of the opinion that the Opposition should set out to defeat the minority Progressive Conservative government as swiftly as possible and force an election.

A major opportunity for an amendment expressing want of confidence in the government will be offered Monday afternoon on a formal government motion to move the Commons into committee on the administration's spending estimates.

There have been rumors that the Liberals would take Monday's opportunity to make their first move of the session to upset the government.

But it is reported that more party stalwarts oppose that than favor it.

Mr. Pearson told reporters Thursday night that was something to be decided in caucus and that the caucus would be very soon "for events are crowding in on us."

So far, the official Liberal opposition has followed its promise made at the start of the session in mid-October—that it would not initiate or vote for any motions seeking the overthrow of the government until the new administration has had a chance to present its program of legislation.

It is understood the party's seasoned veterans and many of its younger circle feel that to force an election would enable the government to go to the people with a complaint that it was not given an opportunity to put its program into action.

An early election would relieve the government of bringing down a budget and of coming

Pearson Pulls No Punches Laying Policies on Line

OTTAWA (CP)—A new political personality has emerged from the national Liberal convention, a man skilled in international diplomacy who has suddenly turned blunt fury on his domestic opponents.

Lester B. Pearson, the one-time semi-professional baseball player who won the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize, demonstrated Thursday night that he will pull no punches against the progressive Conservative government.

After his overwhelming victory as new leader the audience of more than 5,000 persons gave him a tremendous, prolonged cheer as he prepared to deliver his acceptance address, a speech studded with charges against the Conservatives and full of hope for the Liberals' future.

Summing up his own brand of liberalism, the new leader outlined eight main objectives and beliefs:

1. A Canada united, but not in narrow nationalism.
2. Full employment, striving to end recessions.
3. Increased social security.
4. Trade expansion, not diversion.
5. Fair sharing of Canada's wealth with less-developed regions and primary producers.
6. Expansion of share-the-wealth equalization payments to the provinces.
7. NATO strengthening, and support of the United Nations as the cornerstone of Canada's foreign policy.

8. Termination of the Progressive Conservative "pause" in Canada's expansion.

The new leader promised to lead his party back to power "soon."

The 60-year-old former career diplomat pledged himself to follow Liberal principles and told a cheering convention:

"With your help, I can and will lead this new, strong and great party to victory—and soon—not for ourselves but for our country."

fatherly air were all missing from this speech.

So, too, were those "pulsating platitudes" and self-hypnosis which he attributed to his opponent Diefenbaker.

Pearson began with the familiar boyish grin, the homespun pleasantries, the disarming look of innocence, the hands thrust casually into the coat pockets, the black-rimmed spectacles sliding from his nose.

He finished with clenched fists, hoarse voice and the blows of a sledge hammer. And in the course of this transformation he laid down so all could see them the battle lines of his election campaign.

The campaign thus revealed is based on three propositions. First, the Liberal Party governs Canada well in Canada's greatest years but can do still better on its return to power.

Second, the Conservative government is not responsible for all the nation's economic troubles but has gravely worsened them by timidity, hesitation, confusion, concealment of vital facts and especially by mismanagement of foreign trade.

Third, the Liberal Party and only the Liberal Party can rescue the nation from the last seven months of blundering and unemployment, but must not promise impossibilities or make national business a "give away program or a lottery."

This will be Pearson's approach to the political crisis scheduled to break next week, and his approach will have far more effect on Liberal policy than the party's new platform.

Ended in New Upsurge of Confidence

The public will soon forget the platform. Pearson will be around for a long time yet.

So ended the Liberal Party's fourth national convention in a new upsurge of confidence, most of it built on the personality of one man.

That man, dog tired now but still grinning, was led by a pipe band upstairs to a littered room where he faced a battery of inquisitive reporters.

After they were finished with their inquisition could Pearson escape at last to his home and his preparations for next week's crucial events.

But there was more to the leadership than his elevation to leadership.

While the minds of the delegates and the nation were concentrated on a vivid human being the Liberal party was laboriously executing a fundamental shift of policy comparable only to its great shift under King into the welfare state.

When it assembled in Ottawa the party had to consider, apart from leadership, one simple but urgent question—should it maintain the stern posture of its last years in office or should it move sharply leftwards and seek to outrun the Diefenbaker government in the pursuit of social reform?

That choice has now been made. The party has moved sharply to the left and far beyond the government in the promise of a better society for all Canadians.

The new platform leaves no doubt on this score.

New Liberalism Broad, Costly

Though the party has returned to its oldest principles in sponsoring free trade with Britain and lower tariffs. In general, it has pressed forward the new Liberalism on a broad and costly front.

Contributory old age pensions at 65 years of age, a form of parity prices for farmers, a scheme of health insurance, new federal aid to education, low-cost housing, large public works to relieve unemployment, deliberate deficits to stimulate business by the Keynesian Theory—all these and other reforms are designed to retrieve the clothes of radicalism which the Tories stole last June while the St. Laurent government was in bathing.

The promises of the platform are outlined in detail, but as at the Conservative convention of 1956 no one has stopped yet to reckon up their cost.

Mr. Pearson evidently had it in mind, however, when in a significant warning to his followers he bluntly pledged himself to stand against irresponsible clamor for excessive public services that would mean big government and big bureaucracy.

Nevertheless large new costs are quite explicit in the Liberal policy as laid down by the convention.

Period of Heavy Deficits Ahead

There are great inflationary pressures in it also and undoubtedly under any available government a period of heavy deficits ahead.

If the Conservative and Liberal conventions represented it accurately, this kind of policy is what the Canadian people want. Assuredly they will get it in the visible future.

The convention delegates were not thinking of these things as they went home.

They were thinking of Mike Pearson and the party's new unity as symbolized by their last glimpse of him, his hand held aloft by a defeated but smiling Paul Martin.

ship, like the whole party, seemed united, friendly and confident after an unnoted human incident which presented in allegory a revealing image of the new down-to-earth age in Liberal politics.

Martin, who seldom carries money with him, begged a cup of coffee from a newspaper correspondent and then begged a cafeteria lunch from Pearson, who readily agreed, but, picking up the cheque, found that he had only 30c in his pocket.

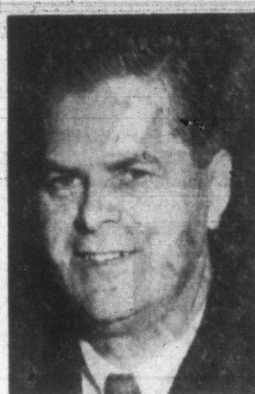

He borrowed a couple of dollars and paid the cashier. That could never have happened to Laurier, King or St. Laurent in an era now well and truly buried.

NEW LIBERAL LEADER 'FINE MAN'—BENNETT

Premier Bennett said today he thinks the new Liberal Party leader, Lester Pearson, is "personally a very fine man and a fine Canadian."

The Premier said the wrong interpretation had been placed on a remark he made Thursday that neither Mr. Pearson nor Paul Martin were fit to hold office as prime minister.

What he meant, Mr. Bennett said, was that both men were unfit only in the sense they were members of the previous Liberal government and share responsibility for present economic conditions which he says were brought on by tight money policies.

minister dropped his customary gloved diplomatic approach and let go with a sharp political blast against the Conservatives.

The resolutions adopted by the three-day Liberal convention, he said, were a startling and stimulating contrast to those passed at the 1956 Conservative convention. The Conservative resolutions were "born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history."

"CRITICAL TIME"
"At this critical time, government is more than a give-away program or a national lottery."

An MP for Algoma East, Ont., since 1948, he said he would give the party energetic, aggressive leadership, "but not narrowly partisan." He might make mistakes but "I can promise you that they will be honest mistakes."

Then, turning to the retiring leader, Louis St. Laurent, he added: "I want to say to him that we still need him in the active ranks of the party, as long as he is willing to serve."

Mr. Pearson has asked Mr. St. Laurent to remain as opposition leader in the Commons until next Monday.

While promising delegates that he soon will attempt to lead the Liberals back to power, he gave no indication of how he plans to do this.

"This first task is to convince the Canadian people that, already, they need us again to manage their affairs."

GROWING CONCERN

Though the Conservatives had been only seven months in office, there was growing concern in the country over trade and unemployment.

"Now it would be foolish and unfair to blame the government for everything that has gone wrong—and much has—since last June. We will not talk and act in that regard as they did when they were in opposition."

But, the Conservatives had created an atmosphere of uncertainty—"the propaganda

SPEECH PEARSON VISITS B.C. JAN. 24-26

OTTAWA.—Hon. L. B. Pearson, leader of the opposition and new leader of the Liberal party will be in Vancouver Jan. 24 to 26, but his present plans do not include a visit to Victoria.

The trip to the west coast was scheduled before the leadership convention, which the Conservatives seem to think will hypnotize the Canadian people into believing what is not true seems likely only to hypnotize themselves.

Unemployment was a challenge to society, a challenge which a Liberal government, unlike the Conservatives, would meet. It also would meet farm problems.

But the party's first job was organization. It had to have "and will have—at once—a strong, decentralized organization based on our constituency associations."

TO TRAVEL WIDELY

"To see that we have it, I am prepared to travel widely across the length and breadth of this country. I want to meet you and hear your views as to what we should be doing to maintain and strengthen the organization of this party."

"Then our renewed and strengthened organization must put forth our message of a new and strong and progressive Liberalism."

"With the right policies—and right organization—we will soon be returned to office again. That is the greatest service we now can perform for Canada."

James G. Gardiner and 56 for former air minister (now senator) G. G. (Chubby) Power.

The late Mackenzie King got in as a dark horse in 1919. Previous leaders were chosen by the top party advisers.

After Thursday night's voting Mr. Pearson got quick unanimity from the convention of his selection, at Mr. Martin's motion, and his former colleague pledged full support.

He promptly promised to lead the Liberals back to power "soon" and blasted the Conservatives with one of the strongest political attacks he has made since he came out of the neutrality of a career civil servant to become minister of external affairs in 1948.

Platform resolutions adopted at the 1956 convention that chose John G. Diefenbaker as Conservative leader, he said, were born in controversy and frustration, were misshapen and unattractive after birth and were then quietly smothered in one of the cruelest acts of political infanticide in history.

Mr. Martin, who had waged an intensive fight for the leadership, met the convention verdict with a smile and said to the delegates:

"You have just elected the next prime minister of Canada."

GRASS ROOTS APPEAL

The former health minister's supporters had based much of their campaign on the contention that he had appeal for the "grass roots" as opposed to the party brass supposedly supporting Mr. Pearson.

Former agriculture minister Gardiner was the only former cabinet colleague to back Mr. Martin publicly, partly because of an expressed belief that Mr. Martin is the best vote-catcher in the country.

Mr. St. Laurent maintained an air of outward neutrality, but it was reported he favored Mr. Pearson, his successor as external affairs minister.

Right after the vote, Mr. St. Laurent urged party workers to get solidly behind Mr. Pearson and expressed confidence he will become prime minister at the next election.

Later, it was announced that although the Commons sits today Mr. St. Laurent—at the new leader's request—will remain as opposition leader until Monday, when Mr. Pearson will take over.

The new leader, who has sat in the Commons for northern Ontario's Algoma East mining constituency since 1948, will carry into the next election virtually a brand new platform from the one with which the Liberals went down to defeat last June 10 after 22 years of uninterrupted power.

B.C. Man Gets Share In Williamson Mine

DAR-ES-SALAAM, Tanganyika (Reuters).—John Williamson, Canadian multi-millionaire diamond magnate who died earlier this month, left 800 shares in his mine to his brother and sister, it was announced today.

His brother, Percy Boyd Williamson, of Kelowna, B.C., already owned 300 of the 1,200 shares in the Mwadui diamond mine.

Williamson and his sister,

Mrs. Alex R. Millar, announced the majority shares will remain in the Williamson family and said they do not intend to sell the mine.

I. C. Chopra, the late mine owner's legal adviser and friend, owns 100 shares in the mine. He and Percy Williamson will be the new company directors.

Percy Williamson, who arrived here earlier this week, and Mrs. Millar, who is believed to be living in London, were the only close relatives of Williamson.

Saanich Court Dismisses Illegal Dentistry Charge

A charge of practicing dentistry illegally against Norman Mallard, 290 Burnside, was dismissed Thursday in Saanich police court.

Judgment was given by Magistrate H. C. Hall after hearing the case last week.

He said the crown had produced insufficient evidence to prove its case.

Private detective Robert Charles Blishen, Vancouver, said he went to Mallard's office to have a denture plate repaired after being instructed to get evidence on Mallard by the College of Dental Surgeons.

Two teeth were replaced, the plate was fitted to Blishen's mouth and a $5 fee charged. The investigator asked for a receipt and the man, who said he didn't usually provide receipts because it took too much time, signed the paper N. Mallard.

Blishen's wife, who accompanied him to the dental technician's office at 290 Burnside, also gave evidence. She said the man who she and her husband knew as Mallard looked in her mouth and said she required some dental work before she could be provided with dentures.

She and her husband said he offered to do the mechanical work after the dental work was done by someone else.

But when it came time to identify the man in court, Blishen refused to name anyone positively, and his wife pointed out the wrong man.

Defence counsel George Gregory was absent at this week's session, but Robert Harvey appeared on his behalf.

It was not made clear at the first or second hearing whether the accused had been present when evidence was taken.

Thursday, Mr. Harvey brought the accused to court but did not wish to place him on the witness stand.

The case was closed, without additional evidence.

The storm moved into Nova Scotia Wednesday night and lashed the province with winds of up to 60 miles an hour. Up to five inches of rain fell in some areas.

The full force of the storm has been concentrated for the most part on mainland Nova Scotia, with Cape Breton receiving negligible amounts of rain and heavy winds.

The hardest hit areas are in southern and western Nova Scotia where many rivers and streams were running at flood levels.

Flooding has forced families to evacuate their homes near Bridgewater where water up to a depth of three feet is threatening the homes.

Railway lines to the south shore were under water in many places. The flooding is up to five feet in some low-lying areas.

Cyrous Chief Leaves

LONDON (AP)—Sir Hugh Foot expressed belief today that a "just settlement" will be found to the Cyprus problem. He then boarded a plane to return to his duties as governor of the Mediterranean island.

Pearson Cheered By Friends, Foes

(From Times' Wire Services)

Newly-elected leader of the Liberal Party, Lester B. Pearson, today was the subject of congratulations from many quarters. Political foes as well as friends paid tribute to his high personal qualities.

Meanwhile loser in the leadership election, Hon. Paul Martin, received applause from all sides of the Commons when he entered the chamber for today's sittings.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, confined to his home with a back ailment, issued the text of a telegram he had sent to Mr. Pearson. It said:

"My warmest congratulations are extended to you on the achievement of the highest honor your party can offer, which carries with it the great responsibilities of leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in Parliament. With all good wishes for continued health and happiness."

Mr. Pearson, who will not take his seat in the Commons as Opposition leader until Monday, replied by telegram: "Please accept my warm appreciation of your friendly message of congratulations on my election as leader of the Liberal party. Kindest personal regards."

At United Nations headquarters, Mr. Pearson's winning of the leadership of Canada's Liberal party gratified his many admirers on the banks of the East River.

It's safe to say no statesman of any country has been more popular than Pearson over the years with the diplomats and newsmen who regularly attend the sessions of the General Assembly and the Security Council.

"Pearson is one diplomat who never leads with his chin, yet never ducks a hard question," explained one veteran correspondent. "He weaves an almost hypnotic spell at times over even the most insulated of his colleagues and the most hard-boiled reporters."

Another said "Mike Pearson is the most approachable big shot I know. Very few American newsmen ever get to know Henry Cabot Lodge well enough to call him 'Cabot.' Nearly everybody soon learns to call Mr. Pearson 'Mike' and feel he is being neither familiar nor disrespectful."

Oil Trade Jeopardized Canada Warns U.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has suggested to the United States government that its action in asking voluntary restriction of oil imports, including Canadian crude, is jeopardizing oil trade between the two countries.

In a strongly worded protest note sent to Washington and tabled today in the Commons, the Canadian administration said that Canada's imports of American oil in 1956 exceeded $100,000,000 a year.

"Surely it is unwise," the note added, "to jeopardize this two-way trade which works to the benefit of both countries."

Mother, Infant Found Dead in Car

PORT ALBERNI (CP)—The body of a woman clutching her dead baby in her arms was found Thursday in the garage of a home here.

Police said they consider it to be a murder and suicide. Mrs. James O'Connor, mother of six children, was found dead in the back seat of a car parked in the garage at her home. Clutched in her arms was the body of her five-months-old baby girl.

The discovery was made by Mr. O'Connor when he returned home for lunch and found the car motor running and the garage doors stuffed with blankets.

An inhalator crew failed to revive the woman and baby. The other O'Connor children range in age from seven to 16 years.

Mr. O'Connor is an inspector for the federal fisheries department.

Pump Failure Blamed In Gassing

DUNCAN (CP)—Escaping chlorine gas, which hit 19 workers at the B.C. Forest Products pulp mill at Crofton Wednesday, was caused by the failure of a pump, a company spokesman said Thursday.

"The pump failure caused the chlorine to back up in the line and become free in the area where the workmen were engaged," he said. "This type of failure while equipment and installations are under test is not unexpected."

"Under normal conditions the chlorine should have been cut off when the pump went out of commission. But it is well that this type of failure should be caught during test, when this type of occurrence is expected."

Of the 19 men exposed to the three needed hospital treatment. One of these, J. D. Kaiser, a B.C. Forest Products employee, was released Wednesday.

Two men, Charles Stewart, 50, and Dan Moroz, 59, were still in hospital Thursday. The hospital reported they would most likely be kept in hospital for another day at least, but their condition is satisfactory.

WEIR HEADS SCHOOL BOARD

LANGFORD — New chairman of Sooke School Board is Ronald J. Weir, Methosin, elected at the inaugural meeting of the board this week to replace Trustee John S. Williams.

LONDON (UP) — Soviet Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev travelled secretly to Poland this week for talks with the anti-Stalinist leaders of Poland's "Independent Communist" government, radio Moscow disclosed today.

$450,000 Plan For New Schools

NANAIMO — School Inspector Claude Campbell has recommended to trustees of Nanaimo School District 68 that $450,000 in school building requirements be undertaken this year.

In a by-law last month voters authorized spending of $840,000 over a three-year period.

A priority list will be sent to the education department as follows: Seven-room addition to John Barsby School; new eight-room school in Brechin; addition of three classrooms and an office at Mount Benson School; addition of two classrooms at Departure Bay, and addition of one classroom at North Cedar, Chase River and Gabriola.

A secondary program to assist the "do it now" program of government and labor was proposed by Trustee Frank Murphy, and won the unanimous support of the board. As a result, works superintendent James Thorpe was ordered to draw up a program of necessary maintenance, repair, and decoration that can be done in the "off season."

Board chairman Mrs. Marion Ricker named committee chairmen as follows: Ted Barsby, finance; Gordon Mackay, social; Nat Martin, buildings; Mr. Murphy, maintenance; Arthur Day, transportation; George Hoggan, Departure Bay, and addition of one classroom at North Cedar, Chase River and Gabriola.
